Manhunt On For Life Termer Kenneth Oliver

By BRANDON BROWN
Staff Writer

JACKSON — State police were reported hunting for the convicted murderer of a Niles state trooper who apparently escaped Friday from the maximum security section of Southern Michigan prison here.

The hunt was on for Kenneth Eugene Oliver, 35, of Detroit, sentenced to life imprisonment in June, 1973, for first-degree murder of Trooper Steven DeVries during flight from a $38,000 Niles bank robbery Oct. 12, 1972.

Police said late Friday night that Oliver was last seen Friday morning during a headcount at prison.

There has been no trace of Oliver, police said, adding that after several searches of the prison facility they were assuming he had fled prison.

Last October, Oliver was sentenced to a concurrent 15-year prison term for a Buffalo, N.Y., bank robbery that occurred in July, 1972, three months before Trooper DeVries was slain in southwestern Michigan.

The Berrien county prosecutor's office charged Oliver pumped four pistol slugs into Trooper DeVries on US-12 bypass south of Niles minutes after taking two hostages and robbing a west Niles branch bank of some $38,000.

Judge Chester J. Byrns of Berrien circuit court heard the trial, found Oliver guilty of "calculated" first-degree murder, and set sentence of life in prison at hard labor, in solitary confinement, with recommendations he stay in maximum security and never be released.

"This was a calculated killing done without any legal justification or excuse or with any mitigation to reduce it to any lower degree of homicide than first degree murder," Judge Byrns said in handing down a conviction ruling. The verdict capped a seven-day trial.

While serving the life sentence levied by Judge Byrns, Oliver was convicted of robbing a Buffalo, N.Y., bank of $40,000 in July, 1972. The government said Oliver was free on bail after the Buffalo robbery when Trooper DeVries was slain.

Senate OK's $33.1 Billion Cut In Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The largest tax cut in the nation's history, designed to stimulate the economy with something for literally every American taxpayer, won final approval in the Senate early today.

The $33.1 billion package of tax reductions was passed on a 60-29 vote and sent to a conference with House members to work out a compromise with the $19.9 billion bill approved by the House.

The Senate bill would provide most families with a rebate on 1974 taxes of $120 to $240, guarantee a one-time $100 bonus to every Social Security recipient, grant a $40 reduction in 1975 taxes for virtually all individuals and provide an optional tax credit that would give additional relief mainly to families under the $20,000 income level that itemize deductions.

The package includes a $7.4 billion tax cut for business, mainly by raising the tax incentive for buying new equipment.

The $33.1 billion figure approved by the Senate at 1:40 a.m., ending an 18-hour workday, is more than double the $16.2 billion President Ford recommended.

In the view of some congressional economists, the net tax cut amounts to $29.3 billion because the bill also repeals $3.8 billion in tax breaks for corporations, mainly the large oil companies.

Many of the 29 senators who voted against the bill said they consider the total too large because of the rising budget deficits brought on by heavy federal spending in recent years and a loss of tax revenues because of the recession.

"This tax cut will not meet the needs of the economy," said Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill. "It will show America that Congress is not willing today to face up to the measures required to meet the problem."

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and floor manager of the bill, said, "The strength shown by the Senate on this bill was remarkable."

The conferees will begin work Monday on hammering out a final figure for the tax cut — a figure that Long said will be around $30.5 billion.

With Congress due to start its Easter recess late next week, the tax-cut bill is expected to be sent to President Ford on Wednesday.

In addition to the $33.2-billion

$2,811 In 'Cold Cash' Is Missing

NILES — About $2,811 in cash stored in a cooler was reported taken in a break-in of Mark's bar, 417 Brookfield street, Niles, this morning, police said.

The cash was stored in a cooler because the Saturday morning bartender did not know the combination to the bar's safe, police quoted an employe as having said.

The building was entered sometime after the business closed early this morning, police said.

The glass in a door at the building's rear had been broken out.

Police said the cash was kept in a cash box stored inside the cooler.

Inmate For 54 Years To Be Freed

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Roman Olezniczak, who has spent almost all his adult life behind bars, soon will get his first taste of freedom in 54 years.

Olezniczak, 75, the longest serving convict in the Michigan prison system, had his life term sentence commuted by Gov. William G. Milliken Thursday.

Olezniczak currently is housed in Southern Michigan Prison where for the last seven years he has been a night watchman in the prison laundry.

Leonard McConnell, state parole board chairman, said a parole order will be issued for Olezniczak and taken to Jackson. He said that two or three days after that, Olezniczak will be free.

Parole was recommended by the State Board in January.

The elderly lifer will be released to Bay City where in 1920 he and three others robbed a bank and killed two bystanders.

He said in January that if released, he plans to spend some time with a sister in Bay City, then go out on his own.

Swindled Out Of $8,000!

WOMAN IS 'PIGEON DROP' VICTIM

By NICK SMITH
Staff Writer

A 62-year-old Coloma woman told Benton bharbor police yesterday she was bilked of $8,000 by two other women who offered to split with her cash and a negotiable bond worth some $30,000 the two women claimed they had found.

Victim of the reported "pigeon drop" confidence game, according to police, was Helen Hannon, route 2, box 608, Kerlikowski road, Coloma.

Det. Sgt. Sam Watson said that one of the women who tricked Mrs. Hannon out of her money falsely represented herself as an employe of William Roney & Co., a Benton Harbor stock brokerage firm.

Roger Maurer, manager of Roney's, said the women described by Mrs. Hannon do not work at the firm.

According to police, the con game worked this way:

Mrs. Hannon, shopping at the Benton Harbor Sears store yesterday morning, was approached by a well-dressed woman in her 30's. The woman held a brown envelope which she told Mrs. Hannon she had just found.

The envelope was opened and it contained a white paper with the figure $33,000 written on it and what appeared to be cash. The person told Mrs. Hannon that the envelope contained a negotiable bond. Claiming that she worked at Roney's, the woman told Mrs. Hannon that she would take the bond there and determine its value, Mrs. Hannon told police afterwards.

A second woman appeared, said she would like to see the valuables, and the three left the store. The alleged brokerage house employee walked across the street to Roney's while the victim and the other woman waited.

According to real employees at Roney's, a tall neatly-dressed woman entered the business at about 11:45. She said she was waiting for someone and to pass the time asked how all the machines worked and left after a while.

Mrs. Hannon told police that the well-dressed woman returned, said she'd talked to the manager and added that for $8,000 the manager would change the serial numbers on the bond.

The elderly woman and the con artist went to a local bank while the second con artist, who had kept Mrs. Hannon company while the well-dressed woman visited Roney's, left. The victim withdrew $8,000 of her savings and gave it to the younger woman, she told police.

The con artist then said she was going back to Roney's. After waiting awhile, Mrs. Hannon herself entered the establishment, she told police.

According to Roger Maurer, the actual manager of Roney's, an elderly woman entered his business and asked to speak with the "colored woman" who worked there. Maurer said no such person worked at the office and the woman said "Then I've been swindled!"

According to police the two woman con artists are both black and about five feet, five inches tall. One is about 35 and weighs about 125 while the other is about 26 and is heavy set.

A Tax Break For Chrysler

DETROIT (AP)-Chrysler Corp. would get a $150 million tax cctffr a bill passed by the Senate early today but Chrysler officials inssted it was not a subsidy.

Both Michigan Senators, Democrat Philip A. Hart and Republican Robert P. Griffin, voted for the measure which passed on a 60-29 vote. It now goes to a conference committee to work out compromises with the House passed bill.

Roger Helder, Chrysler vice president and comptroller, said the measure would not mean any big tax refund check for the auto firm this year.

Instead, it allows Chrysler to calculate its losses and profits back eight years, instead of three as is now required.

Helder disagreed with interpretations which said the bill would mean a $500 million tax break for Chrysler. "People may see it as a subsidy but that is not right ..it only permits us to level off our earnings and losses..a matter of timing," he said.

He said the bill would have no effect on the firm's 1974 year as the books are already closed on that one. The firm lost $52 million last year and had almost no tax carryover credits in 1975, he said.

To explain the tax measure, he gave a hypothetical example based on what would happen if Chrysler lost $50 million in the current quarter.

He said the corporate tax rate is about 50 per cent and under the new bill, if the firm lost $50 million for the quarter it would get a $25 million credit.

If the loss amounted to $150

Conscience Tugs South Havenite; Returns Money From Stolen Check

By TOM RENNER
South Haven Correspondent

SOUTH HAVEN — The guilty conscience of a South Haven man led to the solving of a stolen welfare check before police knew it had been taken yesterday. City police say a man came into the station yesterday and said he cashed a $130.50 ADC check under false pretenses at a South Haven grocery store approximately 30 minutes before. The man returned the money in full saying his conscience bothered him after having committed the act. He told police he had cashed a check sent to a South Haven woman who had recently moved to Illinois. Police said they exchanged the check for the money and that no charges were filed against the man.

How A Pet Becomes A Human Problem

The other day the police in the Detroit suburb of Taylor entered a home to check on the whereabouts or condition of its occupant, a 49-year-old woman on welfare, The Wayne County Social Services Department requested the assistance.

The officers found the woman and 89 poodles, five in an outside pen and 84 in what amounts to pigpen conditions inside the house.

The officers carted most of the hapless animals to the Taylor Humane Society and the woman to Wayne County's General Hospital where she voluntarily committed herself to psychiatric care. A few dogs had to be destroyed because the veterinarian felt their neglected condition admitted of no viable treatment.

This is an exaggerated illustration of a growing problem which, if not met with some common sense, will be handled by the customary frenetic solution of government action which likes to fire a blunderbuss at a target best suited for a rifle.

Until a century or more ago the keeping of an animal as a pet was reserved for royalty and the wealthy. Lesser members in the social totem pole maintained animals for work; cats as mousers, dogs to round up sheep and cattle and as guards for the homestead, mules, horses, and oxen to plow and haul.

The animal graduated from the work status into a pet as machinery replaced human and animal sinew for productivity.

In the past two decades the pet seems to moving through a transition, one not of his choosing and certainly one to his suffering.

He still is a companion to the person genuinely fond of cats and dogs, but in the words of Edward Hoagland, an anti-cruelty spokesman-author, he has, become a status symbol, something like the hibachi, the second car, golf clubs or anything else indicating to the neighbors that the family has made it.

This ostentation is one of the many human frailties which have to be accepted since they are inborn, but its effect is disastrous to an animal which instinctively looks to the human for leadership and companionship. This is a particular trait of the dog.

This treating of an animal as a hobby tends to become, in Hoagland's words, "Like used cars, they are disposed of when the family relocates, changes its 'bag,' or in time of divorce."

This irresponsible ownership and the lack of effective birth control measures have created a pet overpopulation that is out of hand in many sectors, specially in the urban centers. New York City is said to number three dogs for every four human inhabitants within its boundary and most of those six million canines are running loose.

The ecological difficulties posed by the secreta of that avalanche and the danger resulting from tame creatures foraging for themselves in a wild condition are self apparent.

The discouraging prospect is the public turning to a Prohibition type of cure or its present day counterpart in the Federal Trade Commission bureaucrats wanting to make it a prison offense to smoke a cigarette.

The dogcatcher will be dispatched against the owner who follows the companionship principle and the hobbyist will go scotfree, not to mention the basically innocent creature being hounded to distraction.

Revising the long standing anti-cruelty statutes to modern conditions and a vigorous pursuit of the inhumane owner are the humane solution to what has been allowed to become an unnecessary dilemma.

In Or Out Of The Ring, Ali's Full Of Surprises

Inside or outside the ring, it isn't easy to compete with Muhammed Ali. In Zaire last Oct. 30, exactly ten years after he first won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston, Ali regained it by defeating George Foreman in eight rounds. Ali's style surprised everyone, most of all Foreman, who came into the ring prepared to squash a butterfly-bee and instead wore himself out as Ali lolled against the ropes.

Now Ali is facing an underdog challenger, Chuck Wepner of Bayonne, N.J., whom he will meet in the Cleveland Coliseum on Monday, March 24. It will be a 15-round fight — that is, if Wepner lasts that long. Odds of up to 10-1 against him are being quoted. And against the voluble Ali, Wepner has learned that the fight begins long before the first bell. The challenger has refused to appear with Ali before the fight, complaining that "Every time we go some place together, Ali gets all the attention." After one joint appearance on a TV talk show, he noted that "I only had about a minute's time." Still, Wepner — an ex-Marine whose favorite pastime is skydiving — can't be too upset about pre-fight tactics. He will get at least $100,000, as well as a crack at the title.

Underdogs sometimes win spectacularly, as Ali's own comeback showed. If Wepner were to walk off with the title, though, it wouldn't be the first surprise of this match. Ali provided that when he announced Feb. 10 that he would fight for expenses only. Any excess from his $1.5 million fee will go to help urban blacks. Beneficiaries would include the Urban League, the Black College Fund, the NAACP, and the Nation of Islam (Black Muslims, of which Ali is a member), "after I have paid my taxes and paid everybody."

The charity stakes increased the next day, when fight promoter Don King announced he would donate part of the box office receipts. Fifty cents from each ticket sold to the match, including closed-circuit TV tickets, will go to the U.N. Children's Fund and to a private organization called Africare. The estimated $300,000 will be used for drought relief efforts in the parched Sahelian countries of Africa. Those who object to title ticket prices, or to boxing itself, can at least gain some comfort from that.

OPPOSES OIL INDUSTRY NATIONALIZATION

Editor:

Your February 24 edition carries a report of the recommendation of the AFL-CIO Executive Council to essentially nationalize the oil industry. At first glace this may appear as a sound and sincere effort to keep oil prices from rising to unexpected heights.

A second glance makes it look like a deliberate attempt to make the gullible public believe that shifting the power to set prices from a number of higher competitive large corporations in the energy field to a much larger, non-competitive and non-profit federal government will benefit the user.

History has shown that the larger price-setting power inevitably leads to higher prices. Union labor demanded and got higher prices for each hour of work than individual workers got. Then small unions banded together into International unions and boosted the price further. For a while the competition between AFL and CIO held increases in check to some degree, but then these merged to gain nearly full control. The Federal Government, recognizing the voting power of the AFL-CIO, could not but aid their efforts and permitted minimum wage, unemployment pay for strikes, etc. to add to the continuing increases in prices.

No doubt the Executive Council expects that both their membership and the public at large will believe that nationalization will permit prices of oil and other energy sources to remain low.

Anyone can take a look at the results of such nationalization in our overseas neighbor and war-time ally England. This one-time world-power and industrial giant now barely survives the staggering burden of a controlled economy. And the burden weighs most heavily on the lower and middle class worker.

So, for the sake of our own middle class workers, who are daily feeling the effects of government control through ever-increasing taxes and prices, I hope the council's suggestion is rejected.

Only a free market with sharply-competitive companies dealing in oil and other energy sources can assure a plentiful supply and keep the price within reason.

The Tigers returned from Lansing with the state Class A championship trophy and record-breaking credentials to be met by a huge motorcade and paraded to the high school for a rally worthy of their accomplishments. Municipal and school leaders praised Coach Don Farnum and his team as the greatest in Michigan interscholastic history and noted with pride their championship demeanor through a season that ended Saturday night when the Tigers were crowned state cham for the second successive year. The Tigers' loyal legion of fans also received tributes for providing the incentive that keeps a team winning and their conduct at games. The Tigers won over Southfield 94 to 68.

Poe No Match For KGB Horror

WASHINGTON — It is apparently an accepted rule of international diplomacy that one nation does not interfere in the internal affairs of another except by stealth, or, of course, when one nation defeats another in war. Then, as after World War II, major internal changes can be ordred by the victors. Sometimes, as in the case of Japan, these changes are lasting and beneficial.

We are in no position to dictate to the USSR on its treatment of Soviet citizens, as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, (D-Wash.) learned when the Soviet Union gave the back of its hand to a trade agreement which seemed to commit it to greater freedom in the emigration of Jews.

But we do, I think have a moral obligation not to do anything in the name of detente which strengthens the Kremlin's hand in the abuse of its citizens, whatever their religious persuasion.

We have a duty, as a civilized people to protest the actions of the Soviet Union in its continued use of psychiatric wards to imprison those whose only crime is that they speak out peacefully against repression.

When Alexander Solzhenitsyn lived in the Soviet Union and his book, "The Gulag Archipelago" had just been released, there was a period when the Western Press was filled with stories about suppression. Today, the reports have largely disappeared.

Why this should be so is strange for new evidence about the actions of the Soviet secret police continue to seep out of that secretive land.

The latest information this reporter has come across is evidence presented by Dr. Norman B. Hirt, president-elect of the American Psychiatric Association; Western Canada division.

As is well known, protesters in the Soviet Union are frequently picked up and sent, without trial, to KGB psyciatric hospitals. A series of examples detailed by Dr. Hirt suggests that KGB psychiatrists administer drugs not permitted in civilian Soviet hospitals, drugs which create charasteristics of one form of insanity or another. In some cases, these drugs leave the victim senile or vegetable-like. These dissenters are then released in this sad condition, some analysts reason, to serve as a warning to other protesters.

Hirt says the KGB seems to use drugs which, when injected, produce extremely high fever; severe joint inflammation and, sometimes, brain damage. In older people they may cause a stroke, chronic arthritis, heart damage or symptoms of senility.

The KGB psychiatrists have also discovered, says Hirt, that huge doses of one drug result in a condition which looks pathologically like atrophy of the brain.

Dissidents in KGB psychiatric units are reportedly rolled tightly in wet canvas which is then allowed to dry out and contract, causing extreme pain and sometimes death.

Some of the KGB's drugs are said to cause the equivalent of epileptic seizures. At the Serbsky Institute, Hirt notes, there are wire cages about a yard long and a yard wide, and somewhat shorter than the height of a man. The dissident is put into a cage naked and given a drug which causes him to flail about uncontrollably until he falls exhausted.

I have no way of verifying these reports, which chill me to the bone. We must now do enough follow-through research to convince ourselves of their truth or falsity.

Is Coup Portugal's Reichstag Fire?

Reporting by our major media on swiftly moving events in Portugal continues to be extremely superficial and gives little actual sense of the political dynamics of the situation. Thus the events of March 11, in which two planes strafed an artillery barracks and some brief fighting occurred, are being taken at face value as a failed coup. In fact, these events show every sign of being Portugal's Reichstag fire.

Briefly: As of February 1933, though Adolph Hitler had been installed as Chancellor, the Nazis had not yet consolidated total power. Accomplishing this posed some serious problems, since the Nazis had only minority support in the country. On the night of February 27, the Reichstag, or parliament building, was destroyed by fire. The circumstances remain murky in many respects, but it looks as if the blaze was touched off by a Dutch Communist named Marinus ver der Lubbe, who, however, was probably a dupe of the Nazis. Some evidence exists that Berlin Nazis had loaded the building with inflammables to make sure the arson was successful.

In any case, the Nazi leadership, with Joseph Goebbels in the forefront, instantly labeled the fire a Communist plot and the prelude to Red insurrection. During the next few days, four thousand Communists were swept up in the dragnet along with numerous Social Democrats and other opposition leaders. Van der Lubbe himself was beheaded after a trial. On February, 28, the day after the fire, President Paul von Hindenburg signed a fateful decree "For the Protection of the People and the State" which suspended civil liberties and due process. Opposition was muzzled, and the gates of total power opened before the Nazi leadership.

Events in Lisbon are moving on a parallel course. The problem facing the Communist and radical military leadership closely resembles the problem the Nazis had to solve in February, 1933. Though the Communists and their allies hold key posts in the government and the armed forces, their support in the country at large is thin. Secret polls put the Communist vote at lower than ten per cent. In the unlikely event that honest elections are held this spring, the Communists would fare badly.

Thus the logic of March 11, and the pseudo-coup. Two air force training planes conducted a brief strafing attack on some artillery barracks on the outskirts of Lisbon, and there was a brief melee between some paratroops and some regular army personnel. One man is said to have died. This is a coup a la King Constantine, and not to be taken seriously.

Government spokesmen, however, were quick to label this an attempted coup by reactionary elements. General Otelo de Carvalho, chief of the security forces, provided the official interpretation: The United States was behind the "coup" and the safety of U.S. Ambassador Frank Carlucci could not be guaranteed. Carlucci, said the general, "had better leave after what happened today."

General Carvalho's role can be compared to that of Goebbels in 1933 — imposing the official rationale, indentifying the scapegoats, laying the foundation for extraordinary measures "For the Protection of the People and the State."

General Antonio de Spinola, a romantic conservative and political bumbler who led the coup last April, is being cast as the vand der Lubbe here, though instead of losing his head he has escaped to Spain. Whether or not Spinola actually plotted the March 11 events is immaterial, of course. From the point of view of the Left, it would even be desirable if the March 11 fiasco had elements of authenticity. And the flight of Spinola to Spain saved the Leftist regime the embarrassment of a trial.

How A Pet Becomes A Human Problem

The other day the police in the Detroit suburb of Taylor entered a home to check on the whereabouts or condition of its occupant, a 49-year-old woman on welfare, The Wayne County Social Services Department requested the assistance.

The officers found the woman and 89 poodles, five in an outside pen and 84 in what amounts to pigpen conditions inside the house.

The officers carted most of the hapless animals to the Taylor Humane Society and the woman to Wayne County's General Hospital where she voluntarily committed herself to psychiatric care. A few dogs had to be destroyed because the veterinarian felt their neglected condition admitted of no viable treatment.

This is an exaggerated illustration of a growing problem which, if not met with some common sense, will be handled by the customary frenetic solution of government action which likes to fire a blunderbuss at a target best suited for a rifle.

Until a century or more ago the keeping of an animal as a pet was reserved for royalty and the wealthy. Lesser members in the social totem pole maintained animals for work; cats as mousers, dogs to round up sheep and cattle and as guards for the homestead, mules, horses, and oxen to plow and haul.

The animal graduated from the work status into a pet as machinery replaced human and animal sinew for productivity.

In the past two decades the pet seems to moving through a transition, one not of his choosing and certainly one to his suffering.

He still is a companion to the person genuinely fond of cats and dogs, but in the words of Edward Hoagland, an anti-cruelty spokesman-author, he has, become a status symbol, something like the hibachi, the second car, golf clubs or anything else indicating to the neighbors that the family has made it.

This ostentation is one of the many human frailties which have to be accepted since they are inborn, but its effect is disastrous to an animal which instinctively looks to the human for leadership and companionship. This is a particular trait of the dog.

This treating of an animal as a hobby tends to become, in Hoagland's words, "Like used cars, they are disposed of when the family relocates, changes its 'bag,' or in time of divorce."

This irresponsible ownership and the lack of effective birth control measures have created a pet overpopulation that is out of hand in many sectors, specially in the urban centers. New York City is said to number three dogs for every four human inhabitants within its boundary and most of those six million canines are running loose.

The ecological difficulties posed by the secreta of that avalanche and the danger resulting from tame creatures foraging for themselves in a wild condition are self apparent.

The discouraging prospect is the public turning to a Prohibition type of cure or its present day counterpart in the Federal Trade Commission bureaucrats wanting to make it a prison offense to smoke a cigarette.

The dogcatcher will be dispatched against the owner who follows the companionship principle and the hobbyist will go scotfree, not to mention the basically innocent creature being hounded to distraction.

Revising the long standing anti-cruelty statutes to modern conditions and a vigorous pursuit of the inhumane owner are the humane solution to what has been allowed to become an unnecessary dilemma.

In Or Out Of The Ring, Ali's Full Of Surprises

Inside or outside the ring, it isn't easy to compete with Muhammed Ali. In Zaire last Oct. 30, exactly ten years after he first won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston, Ali regained it by defeating George Foreman in eight rounds. Ali's style surprised everyone, most of all Foreman, who came into the ring prepared to squash a butterfly-bee and instead wore himself out as Ali lolled against the ropes.

Now Ali is facing an underdog challenger, Chuck Wepner of Bayonne, N.J., whom he will meet in the Cleveland Coliseum on Monday, March 24. It will be a 15-round fight — that is, if Wepner lasts that long. Odds of up to 10-1 against him are being quoted. And against the voluble Ali, Wepner has learned that the fight begins long before the first bell. The challenger has refused to appear with Ali before the fight, complaining that "Every time we go some place together, Ali gets all the attention." After one joint appearance on a TV talk show, he noted that "I only had about a minute's time." Still, Wepner — an ex-Marine whose favorite pastime is skydiving — can't be too upset about pre-fight tactics. He will get at least $100,000, as well as a crack at the title.

Underdogs sometimes win spectacularly, as Ali's own comeback showed. If Wepner were to walk off with the title, though, it wouldn't be the first surprise of this match. Ali provided that when he announced Feb. 10 that he would fight for expenses only. Any excess from his $1.5 million fee will go to help urban blacks. Beneficiaries would include the Urban League, the Black College Fund, the NAACP, and the Nation of Islam (Black Muslims, of which Ali is a member), "after I have paid my taxes and paid everybody."

The charity stakes increased the next day, when fight promoter Don King announced he would donate part of the box office receipts. Fifty cents from each ticket sold to the match, including closed-circuit TV tickets, will go to the U.N. Children's Fund and to a private organization called Africare. The estimated $300,000 will be used for drought relief efforts in the parched Sahelian countries of Africa. Those who object to title ticket prices, or to boxing itself, can at least gain some comfort from that.

Jury Rules BH Slayer Is Still Mentally Ill

By SCOTT WILLIAMSON
Staff Writer

A former Benton Harbor man who allegedly shot and killed a Benton township police sergeant with the officer's own gun in 1970 was found to be still mentally ill by a jury yesterday in Berrien Probate court.

The six-member jury in Judge Zoe S. Burkholz' court deliberated two hours at the conclusion of a two-day mental competency hearing before reaching the verdict against Earl Everett Harrison, 37.

The second step in the committment proceeding, a dispositional hearing, will be held Monday before Judge Bukholz. At the hearing, the judge will consider what types of treatment are offered by various institutions, and then order where Harrison is to be hospitalized. He cannot, however, be freed.

Harrison has spent the last 4½ years in mental institutions after he was found innocent by reason of insanity in 1970 by Berrien Circuit Judge Julian E. Hughes.

Harrison was charged with slaying Sgt. Robert Stevens at the Holmstead restaurant, on Napier avenue, in April, 1970, after Harrison entered the restaurant, pulled Stevens' service revolver from its holster while the officer sat at a table, and shot the 36-year-old veteran officer.

Harrison's continued committment will depend on the outcome of possible future hearings, according to Judge Burkholz' interpretation of the complex state mental health code regarding committments of persons found not guilty by reason of insanity.

The judge said that after a hearing, such as was conducted the last two days, the defendant can be ordered hospitalized for a period not to exceed 60 days. If, within that time limit, the director of the hospital at which the defendant is committed feels there is still a need for treatment, he can request an order from the court for 90 more days of hospitalization.

The judge explained that after every request from a hospital director, the courts are bound to hold a hearing for the defendant, such as the one just completed. Also, the hearing must come within 14 days of the hospital director's request.

If at any of the hearings the defendant is found to be sane, he is freed.

After those two hearings, according to Judge Burkholz, the defendant "can request a re-hearing every six months — which the judge can deny."

In his closing argument, Assistant Prosecutor John Bruha, who presented the state's case along with Chief Assistant Prosecutor Robert U. McDowell, maintained that Harrison should be committed since he fell under the three elements needed for a person to be committed to a mental institution: he is mentally ill; there is a likelihood he will injure himself or others; and there have been acts or threats supporting those indications.

Earlier in the hearing, a number of psychiatrists had testified that Harrison was still mentally ill, had made threats to staff members of hospitals, and had even assaulted the former director of the Kalamazoo state hospital.

Yesterday, Harrison took the stand and testified that he only became aggressive when "wronged" by someone, and admitted being psychotic but said he had it under control. He said he used aggression in a defensive manner, and that the psychiatrists did not properly interview him to reach their diagnoses.

His counsel, St. Joseph Atty. Dean Jennings, argued that not enough violent acts were shown by the prosecution to show that Harrison would harm anyone, and that he is not mentally ill.

Man Shoots Pair; Claims Address Here

CHICAGO (AP) — A Joliet man who also listed Benton Harbor as an address, says he fatally shot two men when they tried to rob him after a card game, police said.

Homicide investigator Thomas Minton said Friday that the Joliet man, Robert L. Russell, 38, admitted to police he operated a card game on the South Side about three times a week.

Russell told police he was walking to his car after a game ended about 5 a.m. Friday when one of the men who had been in the game jumped from behind a tree with a pistol and demanded his money, Minton said.

When Russell grabbed the weapon and fired at the man, identified as Johnnie Akons, 28, of Chicago, another man ran to Akon's aid and was also shot.

Akons and his companion, Jackie Redmond, 29, of Chicago were pronounced dead at a hospital. Police said both of them were armed with guns.

Russell will not be charged in the shootings, officials said.

Minton said Russell told police he was carrying about $420 when he left the game.

Russell's Joliet address was given as 508 Francis. Police said he also gave a Benton Harbor, Mich., address, where he lives on weekends.

(The Benton Harbor address of the Robert L. Russell reportedly involved in the shooting could not be determined. Benton Harbor police said they have no recoreds of the Joliet man.)

Lacy Tells Murder Night Stops

By SCOTT WILLIAMSON
Staff Writer

George Lacy Jr., accused of murdering John Govatos at the Oasis party store in January, yesterday testified that: "I wasn't around him no time. I have never been in that man's store."

The 22-year-old Lacy's testimony came during the eighth day of his first-degree murder trial in Berrien Circuit Judge Julian Hughes' courtroom.

The attorneys in the case, Berrien Prosecutor John A. Smietanka and defense counsel James Ford, finished calling all witnesses in the case yesterday, and will present final arguments on Monday.

Judge Hughes is scheduled to deliver his instructions to the jury on Tuesday, after which the jury will immediately begin deliberations. That will make the trial the longest criminal trial in Berrien circuit court history, according to court sources.

Lacy, of 524 Whitcomb court, Benton Harbor, is accused of killing Govatos Jan. 4 at Govatos' Oasis party store in Hagar township.

Lacy took the witness stand on Thursday, and under examination by Ford, said he never went to the Oasis on Jan. 4, and that his Saturday evening and night (the night of the murder) was spent at bars, driving around in cars, and partying.

He testified to exact times at which he met other people, went to bars, ate breakfast, went home, and woke up. He also testified that he had been drinking wine during the night, smoking marijuana, taking "speed," and had at the most about two hour's sleep from Saturday afternoon until Sunday evening.

Under cross-examination, Smietanka asked Lacy if he wore jewelry. Lacy said no. How about a watch?, the prosecutor asked. Lacy again said no, that he never wore a watch.

Smietanka asked again if Lacy had been drinking during Saturday night. Lacy said he shared some wine while driving a "dude," to South Bend (Lacy was a part-time taxi driver for Twin Cities Cab Lines). Lacy said he purchased more wine, and consumed it during the evening. On Thursday, he testified he had purchased at least two fifths.

Smietanka asked if Lacy had smoked any marijuana.

"I always smoke reefers," came the reply.

Lacy said he had about a quarter pound of marijuana on Saturday afternoon, but by Monday he had to purchase some more.

"You went through about a hundred reefers?" asked Smietanka. "I didn't get rid of all of it," Lacy said, adding that he shared it with others at a party.

The prosecutor asked again if Lacy had taken speed Saturday night. The answer was yes, he had taken it to stay awake.

Smietanka asked if Lacy had much sleep Saturday night. Lacy told him he had slept on and off twice, for a total of about two hours.

Under another question, Lacy again confirmed that from Saturday afternoon until Sunday evening he had been drinking, smoking marijuana, dropping speed, and slept very little.

Smietanka: "You testified you were sure of the exact routes you took and the time (of each event) after no sleep, smoking marijuana, drinking wine, dropping speed, and no watch?"

"How did you know all those times?" Smietanka asked incredulously.

Lacy replied that he had a feel for what time it was.

At this point it was 11:35, and Smietanka asked Lacy what time it was, without looking at the clock. Lacy said "after 11." "How much?" asked Smietanka. "I don't know, I ain't no genius," Lacy declared.

Then Smietanka launched into a series of questions, all of which came as fast as Lacy could reply. The following testimony took only about 35 seconds:

Smietanka: "Mr. Lacy, do you know John Govatos?"

Lacy: "I didn't know him. I seen him in court."

Smietanka: "You had seen him in court, hadn't you?"

Lacy: "That's right."

Smietanka: "He testified against you, hadn't he?"

Lacy: "That's right."

Smietanka: "You didn't like him, did you?"

Lacy: "I didn't love him and he didn't love me so I stayed away from him."

Smietanka: "Except one night, isn't that true?"

Lacy: "No, I stayed away from him."

Smietanka: "Except Saturday night."

Lacy: "No, I wasn't around him no time. I have never been in that man's store."

Smietanka: "You never threatened to kill him?"

Lacy: "No, I ain't never threatened to kill him."

Smietanka: "You never went to the party store and killed him?"

Lacy: "No, no I have —".

Smietanka: "No further questions."

Earlier in the trial, a co-defendant, Donnie Marshall, testified that both he and Lacy went to the Oasis on Jan. 4, and each shot Govatos.

50 Twin Cities Boys In Need Of Y-Uncles

The Twin Cities YMCA Y-Uncle program is seeking area men to befriend 50 boys who are in need of "a warm friend, companion and counselor," Robert Pennypacker, Y-Uncle director, said. The Y-Uncle program, now in its eighth year, assigns area men on a one-to-one basis with boys between the ages of 5 and 12. The boys do not have fathers in their homes. Pennypacker said the 50 boys, about half of them white and half black, need someone who likes kids and is willing to spend at least one hour a week with a "Nephew." There is no age restriction for Uncles except that they at least be in their 20s, Pennypacker said. Some of the best Uncles are in their 60s and 70s, he added. Help is also needed from the wives of married Uncles, Pennypacker said, because "they are the catalysts who will help cement the Uncle-Nephew relationship."

BH Teacher Helps To Evaluate Rutger's Education Program

A Benton Harbor social studies teacher recently went to Brunswick, N.J., with a national education team to evaluate the education of teachers at one of the nation's oldest colleges, Rutgers university.

Astley E. Gordon, a teacher at the Benton Harbor 7th and 8th Grade center, was invited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) along with 24 other teachers from around the nation to examine Rutgers' training of teachers and to determine if the institution would be accredited by NCATE.

Gordon said the evaluating team has filed a report with the NCATE's board of directors who will make the final accreditation decision. The team also learned a great deal about education on the three-day visit to Rutgers, Gordon added.

NCATE evaluates colleges and universities which train teachers and seek accreditation with the state education associations or the National Education Association.

Gordon, a part-time English instructor at Lake Michigan College, is a member of the NCATE, and chairman of the Michigan Education Association's Teacher Education and Professional Standards commission. He is also a member of the African-American Institute.

A native of Jamaica, Gordon came to the U.S. in 1968 to earn a a master's degree in education from Andrews university. He is working on a doctorate from Michigan State. He lives in Berrien Springs.

Jury Rules BH Slayer Is Still Mentally Ill

By SCOTT WILLIAMSON
Staff Writer

A former Benton Harbor man who allegedly shot and killed a Benton township police sergeant with the officer's own gun in 1970 was found to be still mentally ill by a jury yesterday in Berrien Probate court.

The six-member jury in Judge Zoe S. Burkholz' court deliberated two hours at the conclusion of a two-day mental competency hearing before reaching the verdict against Earl Everett Harrison, 37.

Priesthood For Women Now Catholic Issue

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The drive for admission of women to the priesthood, already a boiling issue in the Episcopal Church, now is surfacing on a wider front among Roman Catholics.

It previously simmered mainly in the background, a matter of theological analysis, but a broad-based Roman Catholic coalition now is launching active efforts to extend ordination to women.

The move is being coordinated by an umbrella group called the Ordination Conference Task Force, involving representatives of several seminaries and of eight national organizations of Catholic nuns and other women.

"It's the first definitely focused, grass-roots movement, involving a wide spectrum of American Catholics attempting to open the priesthood to women," says Sister Patricia Hughes of Chicago, a spokeswoman for the group.

This week, it announced plans for a national conference Nov. 28-30 in Detroit on the theme, "Women in the Future Priesthood Now, a Call to Action," with expected participation by about 600 theologians, priests, sisters, laity and some bishops.

"We're acting in love and loyalty to the church," Sister Hughes says. "If we didn't love the church, we would not be seeking the priesthood."

Their objective, however, still appears distant, considering the prevailing stand against it by the world's Catholic bishops, including the Pope. Nevertheless, a 1972 preliminary study for the U.S. bishops said:

"It would seem that neither Scriptural exegesis nor theology alone can give a clear answer to this question. The ultimate answer must come from the magisterium (the bishops and Pope) ..."

While most major Protestant denominations already ordain women, the Episcopal Church, often termed the "bridge" church between Protestantism and Catholicism, currently is wracked with internal struggle over the matter.

As dioceses began electing delegates for next year's denominational convention to act on the issue, candidates sided either pro or anti women's ordination. Simultaneously, investigations and hearings multiplied.

The ecclesiastical legal procedures, including pre-trial inquiries in several dioceses and at the church's headquarters in New York, involved the irregular ordination of 11 women last July.

Preliminary hearings, resembling grand jury inquiries were underway in New York regarding four bishops, three of them retired, who officiated at the ordinations in defiance of the church's tradition of a maleonly priesthood.

Charges or trials also were pending against two pastors, the Rev. L. Peter Beebe of Oberlin, Ohio, and the Rev. William A. Wendt of Washington, D.C., for allowing some of the ordained women to celebrate services of Holy Communion.

On the other hand, two of the women were called as assistant parish priests, the Rev. Katrina Welles Swanson at St. Stephen's in St. Louis, and the Rev. Betty Bone Schiess at Grace Episcopal Church in Syracuse, N.Y.

Two other of the women, the Rev. Susan Hiatt of Philadelphia and the Rev. Carter Heyward of New York, have been appointed assistant professors at the Episcopal Divinity School, Cambridge, Mass., with priestly rights to celebrate communion.

Lenten Meditation

By Rev. Paul Kuntzman
First Congregational Church, Benton Harbor
Today's Scripture: II Corinthians 1:2-4

A children's song entitled "Pass it on" best illustrates the meaning of St. Paul's understanding of the love of God. "God comforts us in all our troubles, so that we in turn may be able to comfort others in any trouble of theirs and to share with them the consolation we ourselves receive from God."

Our compassion, forebearance, and love toward others is in effect an expression of our thankfulness and gratitude to God who has first had compassion and understanding toward us.

Paradoxically, our own ingratitude toward God is seen best as we reflect upon those persons to whom we choose to comfort, console, and support. Most naturally we choose our friends, our relatives, our near neighbors. In the process of choosing we neglect the outcast, the other "class," and those whom we perceive to be enemies.

We should be mindful in the words of the Gospel of John that God has loved the world and given His Son for it. His love is universal even if our love is not. We can however give witness to His love if instead of trying to keep it for ourselves or those whom we like, we "pass it on."

These Lenten Meditations are coordinated by the Berrien County Council of Churches.

179. Elijah's Prophecy to Ahaziah

King Ahaziah had fallen through the lattice of his upper chamber, and he remained seriously injured. He ordered his messenger to go to the temple of the god Baalzebub at Ekron to ask if he would ever recover. However, an angel of the Lord commanded Elijah the prophet to intercept the messengers, and to answer Ahaziah's question.

The angel instructed Elijah to say, "...Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baalzebub the god of Ekron? Now, therefore, thus saith the Lord, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die...." (II Kings 1:3-4)

When the messengers returned and relayed to King Ahaziah the message given to them by a man they could identify as a hairy man girt with a girdle of leather about his loins, only Ahaziah knew that he had been given the Lord's prophecy by Elijah the Tishbite.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Laughter Breaks Tension

Dear Ann Landers: A word please to that crazy lady who wrote, "C'mon, Ann, what would the wedding night be like if BOTH were virgins?" Her point was that a man should be experienced or the nuptial night would be a disaster. She's wrong.

I was 20 when I married and Jim was 21. We were both virgins. I admit I was a little scared at first, but a sense of humor can make all the difference in the world. I'm sorry we didn't have a recording machine under the bed. We kidded each other, made jokes about our clumsiness and laughed until the tears rolled down our cheeks. It was one of the most hilarious evenings of our lives.

Laughter can be a great tension-breaker and that's the way it worked for us. Actually nothing much happened that night but it was just as well. We were both exhausted from the wedding and reception. He promised me, "Tomorrow night it will be different." I replied, still laughing, "It had BETTER be or I'm going home to mother."

Now, 20 years later, we are extremely happy and have a wonderful sex life. People who care about each other don't need experience. Just a lot of love and patience will do. — Just Ask Us

Dear Just: Thank you for sharing an intimate experience. You are so right about laughter. It can be an escape valve that prevents many a catastrophe. Your letter was a perfect example. Jim sounds like a livin' doll.

Poor Reason

Dear Ann Landers: This letter might not be appropriate column material, but I'm writing anyway. Maybe it will give the average citizen a clue as to why certain issues are voted against, even though they are in the best interest of the public.

A badly-needed one-cent sales tax was rejected by the electorate in our community last week. A woman told me, "My baby was mistreated by the coach and I decided not to vote for anything that might help the school system."

I taught her six-foot, one-inch "baby" when he was in junior high. He was the meanest kid I ever had in all my years of teaching. Isn't this ridiculous? — Trout, Louisiana

Dear Trout: Of course it's ridiculous — but people vote their prejudices and short-term self-interests. The only way we'll ever overcome such ignorance is by educating the public.

Compulsive Talker

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 33-year-old divorced woman with a young son. The man who wants to marry me is brilliant, attractive, successful, kind, considerate and he has a marvelous disposition. So what's the problem? The man doesn't stop talking.

From the moment we meet he launches into a detailed account of what he did during the day. He goes from one subject to another. If I try to interrupt he keeps right on talking. When he asks me a question he answers it himself. If he tells me he'd like an opinion, he keeps talking and gives me one.

When we are with friends or his family, I never say boo. People must think I'm an imbecile or that I was born without vocal cords. Any advice? — Mute Mazie

Dear M.M.: This man is a compulsive talker and you can't do a bloomin' thing about it. Do his virtues compensate for what might turn out to be a nerve-shredding deficiency? This I can tell you — if his non-stop talking bothers you now, it will drive you bananas after you are married.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Every time we think of deceptive plays, we come back to a standard play that wasn't standard 35 years or so ago. Harry Fishbein of New York was the first to make it.

Fishbein sat West and was defending against a six-no-trump contract.

He opened the nine of spades. His partner slapped the ace on dummy's queen and led back a spade. Declarer proceeded to cash two spades, three hearts and three dimaonds — slowly and carefully — in the manner of a man who had a problem somewhere.

The manner did not matter to Harry. Harry knew that his jack of clubs was the only card South could be worrying about and he would only have that worry if his four-card suit were clubs.

So, when finally South led dummy's king of clubs and East followed with the three. Harry dropped the nine spot.

This really gave South a cause to think. If the nine had not dropped, the play to his ace would have been automatic because there would be no way to pick up four to the jack-nine in the East hand.

Now, South cold pick up four to the jack in the East hand; so he palys dummy's queen of Clubs. After that play there was no way to finesse the jack.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) "Fun" activities will command most of your attention today. But do heed the little voice that tells you not to make too much of a good thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're anxious to make some changes around the house. Don't undertake a major renovation. You'll run out of steam before it's finished.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're eager to exchange ideas with others. However, it's best to avoid debate on religion or politics.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You've got a good handle on your financial affairs today but avoid telling another how to handle his money. You could create a havoc.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You and your mate may conflict on a topic up for discussion. Don't air your differences in front of others. It will embarrass all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are still in a profitable cycle where benefits come from unusual sources. Be wary — one not entitled may demand a share.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Avoid the center of the stage with friends this evening. You'll be much better off staying on the wings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who is out to get your goat will try to slip in a few barbs today. Don't give him the satisfaction of knowing he irks you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Weigh your words carefully before you speak today. Blurring resentful thoughts will offend companions and provoke an argument.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Have a clear-cut understanding with one who seeks to borrow something. Make known you expect it returned in the same condition — and on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you don't show your mate the attention and consideraton you give others, you'll only hurt yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A matter that has caused you some mental anguish won't be resolved unless you take a harder line. Be firm. Face up to what has to be done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to bring into the act people with goals no in harmony with yours. If you do, something that could be gained will be lost.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful in your commercial dealings. You're likely to make a serious mistake if you act hastily, without checking facts and figures.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful. You may be taken advantage of in a situation where you're dealing in the dark with something material at stake. Get facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something mutually satisfactory can be worked out now regarding an old obligation to a friend. Talk it over.

Multiple sclerosis has resisted yielding some of its complex mysteries to the probings of scientific study.

With special persistence, a group of scientists at the Rockefeller University in New York City are studying this disorder. They believe that cellular immune deficiency may, in a measure, be responsible for this disease. Dr. John Zabriskie and Dr. Virginia Utermohlen are trying to increase the level of immunity in the hope that the progress of mutiple sclerosis may be delayed.

In a series of cases already tried, a few patients have shown remakable improvement with this complicated approach to cellular immunity.

A new aersol spray is being tried for the relief of certain types of asthma.

The durg, triamcinlone acetonide, closely resembles one that has been tried effectively in Great Britain.

At the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, Dr. M. Henry Williams is using the drug as a substitute for the cortisone sprays that are now in use.

The side effects of the drug seem to be less than those associated with the use of the cortisone preparation.

A single drop of blood is all that is needed in a test for lead poisoning which has recently been developed at the Bell Laboratories.

This method will replace the current one in use, which requires a large sample of blood and a long delay in obtaining the results.

The test can be done by a nurse or a paramedical assistant. The sample is placed in a glass slide and passed through a special electronic device.

By this method it will be more convenient to screen, at regular intervals, those workers who may be exposed to lead absorption.

It will be a simpler test, too, for children who are suspected of having high concentrations of lead after nibbling paint off walls or furniture.

Whole Grain Cereal Each Day Helps Keep The Doctor Away

EAST LANSING — Some whole grain cereal, like that "apple a day," may also keep the doctor away, reports Dr. Dale Romsos, a nutritionist at Michigan State university.

Whole grain cereals, high in fiber, starch and other complex carbohydrates, may be important for keeping blood cholesterol and triglyceride levels low, he said.

Elevated cholesterol and triglyceride — long associated with cardiovascular problems besetting Americans — traditionally has been correlated with large amounts of the simple sugar, sucrose (table sugar) in the American diet.

But, according to Dr. Romsos, Americans presently consume no more sucrose than they did 50 years ago.

"What Americans actually have done," he explained, "is alter the relative amount of sucrose consumed so that it forms a larger portion of our diet in relation to complex carbohydrates."

Until recently, experts were split into two camps," Dr. Ramsos said.

Some believed that low amounts of dietary fiber were the cause of high blood cholesterol and triglycerides, but most scientists blamed high sucrose for the problem.

New experiments show that neither explanation was totally correct.

Both factors contribute to cholesterol-triglyceride troubles and an individual's genetic endowment also has an influence on the effects of diet, Dr. Romsos said.

Increased sucrose, he explained, has little or no effect on cholesterol levels. However, some people, because of genetic factors, display increased blood triglyceride levels when on a high sucrose diet.

Reduced fiber in the diet generally produces increased blood cholesterol levels. It also may contribute to the increasing number of colon cancer cases, he added.

You will develop a powerful and influential business contact who will prove to be a profitable asset this year. His goals will be in harmony with yours.

FOR MONDAY, MARCH 24, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You tend to let things go until the last minute today. This could mean you'll be working until the wee hours to catch up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A matter that has caused you some mental anguish won't be resolved unless you take a harder line. Be firm. Face up to what has to be done.

GEMINI (Mary 21-June 20) Try not to bring into the act people with goals no in harmony with yours. If you do, something that could be gained will be lost.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful in your commercial dealings. You're likely to make a serious mistake if you act hastily, without checking facts and figures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Think twice before you reveal your business secrets to anyone. What you tell in confidence will later be broadcast to the wrong ears.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Though you can't do much about it at the moment, give thought to what can be done later to shore up a relationship with a valuable ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have an influential contact who can now help you further more ambitious aims. Don't be hesitant to call upon this person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Better results will be obtained now if you de-emphasize your material goal. Concentrate more upon the friendly support of those involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll have to make a choice between doing something for effect to make you look like a good guy or doing that which is practical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful. You may be taken advantage of in a situation where you're dealing in the dark with something material at stake. Get facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something mutually satisfactory can be worked out now regarding an old obligation to a friend. Talk it over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't worry now about problems you think may be coming up. Handle what's necessary for today. Tomorrow will care for itself.

Opportunity will come your way this year from very unusual souces. Put your best foot forward careerwise. A job well done will repay with many fringe benefits.

Multiple sclerosis has resisted yielding some of its complex mysteries to the probings of scientific study.

With special persistence, a group of scientists at the Rockefeller University in New York City are studying this disorder. They believe that cellular immune deficiency may, in a measure, be responsible for this disease. Dr. John Zabriskie and Dr. Virginia Utermohlen are trying to increase the level of immunity in the hope that the progress of mutiple sclerosis may be delayed.

In a series of cases already tried, a few patients have shown remakable improvement with this complicated approach to cellular immunity.

A new aersol spray is being tried for the relief of certain types of asthma.

The durg, triamcinlone acetonide, closely resembles one that has been tried effectively in Great Britain.

At the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, Dr. M. Henry Williams is using the drug as a substitute for the cortisone sprays that are now in use.

The side effects of the drug seem to be less than those associated with the use of the cortisone preparation.

A single drop of blood is all that is needed in a test for lead poisoning which has recently been developed at the Bell Laboratories.

This method will replace the current one in use, which requires a large sample of blood and a long delay in obtaining the results.

The test can be done by a nurse or a paramedical assistant. The sample is placed in a glass slide and passed through a special electronic device.

By this method it will be more convenient to screen, at regular intervals, those workers who may be exposed to lead absorption.

It will be a simpler test, too, for children who are suspected of having high concentrations of lead after nibbling paint off walls or furniture.

Whole Grain Cereal Each Day Helps Keep The Doctor Away

EAST LANSING — Some whole grain cereal, like that "apple a day," may also keep the doctor away, reports Dr. Dale Romsos, a nutritionist at Michigan State university.

Whole grain cereals, high in fiber, starch and other complex carbohydrates, may be important for keeping blood cholesterol and triglyceride levels low, he said.

Elevated cholesterol and triglyceride — long associated with cardiovascular problems besetting Americans — traditionally has been correlated with large amounts of the simple sugar, sucrose (table sugar) in the American diet.

But, according to Dr. Romsos, Americans presently consume no more sucrose than they did 50 years ago.

"What Americans actually have done," he explained, "is alter the relative amount of sucrose consumed so that it forms a larger portion of our diet in relation to complex carbohydrates."

Until recently, experts were split into two camps," Dr. Ramsos said.

Some believed that low amounts of dietary fiber were the cause of high blood cholesterol and triglycerides, but most scientists blamed high sucrose for the problem.

New experiments show that neither explanation was totally correct.

Both factors contribute to cholesterol-triglyceride troubles and an individual's genetic endowment also has an influence on the effects of diet, Dr. Romsos said.

Increased sucrose, he explained, has little or no effect on cholesterol levels. However, some people, because of genetic factors, display increased blood triglyceride levels when on a high sucrose diet.

Reduced fiber in the diet generally produces increased blood cholesterol levels. It also may contribute to the increasing number of colon cancer cases, he added.

Health Problems Nothing New

By GENE SCHROEDER
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Studies of an ancient Egyptian mummy has disclosed that some of the health problems blamed on modern industrial society may have been around some 2,700 years ago.

MANY HATS: Among the many hats Henry Kissinger wears as Secretary of State and the nation's top diplomat is a cowboy Stetson he dons during a speech in Houston.

In a scientific paper on their findings, a group of researchers from various fields reported evidence Friday that such arterial diseases as arteriosclerosis were common in ancient Egypt.

Although the cause of such diseases are still unknown, it "is clear that arterial disease was common... in former times," they said.

"Whatever the cause, it is an ancient one, and not something that has appeared recently, such as the stress and strain of modern life or modern diet."

Among other findings from the series of tests conducted on the mummy—dubbed "Pum II"—was evidence of silicosis of the lungs.

"Air pollution is not new," the scientists declared. "Ancient human remains from widely separated locales have contained carbon deposits in the lungs similar to those seen in Pum II."

The autopsy on the mummy, borrowed from the Philadelphia Art Museum, was performed in 1973 at Wayne State University here as part of a seminar on death and disease in Ancient Egypt.

Since then, the well-preserved mummy has been subjected to intensive research by pathologists, physiologists, anthropologists, radiologists and Egyptologists.

"A mummy can be a scientific treasure chest," the researchers explained, "but to unlock its secrets, a multi-disciplinary approach is needed."

Their report said that the nature of diseases prevalent thousands of years ago was not only of academic interest.

"In many instances, the eradication of a disease may not be achieved until the way in which it evolved has been determined," it said.

The researchers noted that some carbon deposits found in ancient human remains "presumably resulted from inhaling smoke from fires." They said that carbon itself causes very little damage to lungs unless accompanied by such toxic substances as silica.

"...Pulmonary silicosis is common in miners, quarry workers and potters and may produce considerable morbidity and mortality," the researchers noted.

"The hands of Pum II are not those of a manual worker, so his silicosis is more likely due to the inhaling of sand during the sand storms common in Egypt."

The researchers on the project were volunteers, donating their time because of interest in the subject, and no direct funding was available.

Money For Welfare

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — House Speaker Bobby Crim said Friday he is hopeful the federal government will release quickly $60 million dollars in deferred welfare payments for Michigan.

The deferrals resulted from late filing by state officials of forms required by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare before federal funds are released. Crim and other state officials met with HEW Secretary Casper Weinberger on Thursday about the problem.

Crim said Weinberger agreed to investigate personally decisions by HEW's regional office which withheld the funds.

"There seems to be some consternation on the part of the secretary about why the regional office is handling these deferrals as they are, tying up our funds for sometimes two years or more," Crim said. "I think now they will be taken care of."

State government leaders emphasized to Michigan's congressional delegation the urgency of a federal extension of unemployment benefits. Crim said that without an additional 13 weeks of benefits, the state will have to spend an extra $50 million-$100 million in the next fiscal year in welfare benefits.

PBB CONTAMINATION

Study Reveals No Dangerous Products

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Friday its studies of PBB stock and poultry contaminations reveals no dangerous products on the market and no related human illnesses.

An extensive study by toxicologists of contaminated herds and a health study of indirect human exposure will be completed, analyzed and released within four or five weeks, an FDA official said.

Some have questioned whether FDA guidelines on contamination are strict enough, while there also have been reports of illnesses from people who ate products from herds contaminated below legal levels.

Detroit FDA Director Alan Hoeting said "the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) is unable at this time to confirm any instance of human disease traceable to the 1973 incident."

Polybrominated biphenyl (PBB), a poisonous, fire-retardant chemical, was introduced into Michigan feed stocks in 1973 when it was mistaken for a feed supplement at the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Hoeting said the FDA is confident that all dairy, meat and egg products meeting the agency's guidelines for PBB are safe for human consumption."

He said state and federal authorities "do not know of any food in commercial channels which is above the 0.3 parts per million limit on PBB for milk and meat and 0.05 parts per milllion in eggs.

"On the basis of the best knowledge available, the FDA is confident that the present guideline for PBB provides the necessary margin for human safety," said Hoeting.

The CDC conducted a preliminary review of data krom a health survey of Michigan resident, he said.

He said "three teams of veterinary toxicologists under FDA leadership are in Michigan now surveying health status of exposed herds. This study and anylysis of the human health survey will be completed as soon as possible.

The Michigan Chemical Co. of St. Louis, Mich. manufactured both PBB and the fertilizer and the PBB was mistakenly shipped to the Farm Bureau Services, which mixed it with its feed.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration has since set 0.3 parts per million as a guideline for PBB.

The state Agribulture Department forbids farmers with contaminated herds from either selling the animals or slaughtering them for beef.

Laughter Breaks Tension

Dear Ann Landers: A word please to that crazy lady who wrote, "C'mon, Ann, what would the wedding night be like if BOTH were virgins?". Her point was that a man should be experienced or the nuptial night would be a disaster. She's wrong.

I was 20 when I married and Jim was 21. We were both virgins. I admit I was a little scared at first, but a sense of humor can make all the difference in the world. I'm sorry we didn't have a recording machine under the bed. We kidded each other, made jokes about our clumsiness and laughed until the tears rolled down our cheeks. It was one of the most hilarious evenings of our lives.

Laughter can be a great tension-breaker and that's the way it worked for us. Actually nothing much happened that night but it was just as well. We were both exhausted from the wedding and reception. He promised me, "Tomorrow night it will be different." I replied, still laughing, "It had BETTER be or I'm going home to mother."

Now, 20 years later, we are extremely happy and have a wonderful sex life. People who care about each other don't need experience. Just a lot of love and patience will do. — Just Ask Us

Dear Just: Thank you for sharing an intimate experience. You are so right about laughter. It can be an escape valve that prevents many a catastrophe. Your letter was a perfect example. Jim sounds like a livin' doll.

Poor Reason

Dear Ann Landers: This letter might not be appropriate column material, but I'm writing anyway. Maybe it will give the average citizen a clue as to why certain issues are voted against, even though they are in the best interest of the public.

A badly-needed one-cent sales tax was rejected by the electorate in our community last week. A woman told me, "My baby was mistreated by the coach and I decided not to vote for anything that might help the school system."

I taught her six-foot, one-inch "baby" when he was in junior high. He was the meanest kid I ever had in all my years of teaching. Isn't this ridiculous? — Trout, Louisiana

Dear Trout: Of course it's ridiculous — but people vote their prejudices and short-term self-interests. The only way we'll ever overcome such ignorance is by educating the public.

Compulsive Talker

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 33-year-old divorced woman with a young son. The man who wants to marry me is brilliant, attractive, successful, kind, considerate and he has a marvelous disposition. So what's the problem? The man doesn't stop talking.

From the moment we meet he launches into a detailed account of what he did during the day. He goes from one subject to another. If I try to interrupt he keeps right on talking. When he asks me a question he answers it himself. If he tells me he'd like an opinion, he keeps talking and gives me one.

When we are with friends or his family, I never say boo. People must think I'm an imbecile or that I was born without vocal cords. Any advice? — Mute Mazie

Dear M.M.: This man is a compulsive talker and you can't do a bloomin' thing about it. Do his virtues compensate for what might turn out to be a nerve-shredding deficiency? This I can tell you — if his non-stop talking bothers you now, it will drive you bananas after you are married.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Every time we think of deceptive plays, we come back to a standard play that wasn't standard 35 years or so ago. Harry Fishbein of New York was the first to make it.

Fishbein sat West and was defending against a six-no-trump contract.

He opened the nine of spades. His partner slapped the ace on dummy's queen and led back a spade. Declarer proceeded to cash two spades, three hearts and three dimaonds — slowly and carefully — in the manner of a man who had a problem somewhere.

The manner did not matter to Harry. Harry knew that his jack of clubs was the only card South could be worrying about and he would only have that worry if his four-card suit were clubs.

So, when finally South led dummy's king of clubs and East followed with the three. Harry dropped the nine spot.

This really gave South a cause to think. If the nine had not dropped, the play to his ace would have been automatic because there would be no way to pick up four to the jack-nine in the East hand.

Now, South cold pick up four to the jack in the East hand; so he palys dummy's queen of Clubs. After that play there was no way to finesse the jack.

Multiple sclerosis has resisted yielding some of its complex mysteries to the probings of scientific study.

With special persistence, a group of scientists at the Rockefeller University in New York City are studying this disorder. They believe that cellular immune deficiency may, in a measure, be responsible for this disease. Dr. John Zabriskie and Dr. Virginia Utermohlen are trying to increase the level of immunity in the hope that the progress of mutiple sclerosis may be delayed.

In a series of cases already tried, a few patients have shown remakable improvement with this complicated approach to cellular immunity.

A new aersol spray is being tried for the relief of certain types of asthma.

The durg, triamcinlone acetonide, closely resembles one that has been tried effectively in Great Britain.

At the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, Dr. M. Henry Williams is using the drug as a substitute for the cortisone sprays that are now in use.

The side effects of the drug seem to be less than those associated with the use of the cortisone preparation.

A single drop of blood is all that is needed in a test for lead poisoning which has recently been developed at the Bell Laboratories.

This method will replace the current one in use, which requires a large sample of blood and a long delay in obtaining the results.

The test can be done by a nurse or a paramedical assistant. The sample is placed in a glass slide and passed through a special electronic device.

By this method it will be more convenient to screen, at regular intervals, those workers who may be exposed to lead absorption.

It will be a simpler test, too, for children who are suspected of having high concentrations of lead after nibbling paint off walls or furniture.

Whole Grain Cereal Each Day Helps Keep The Doctor Away

EAST LANSING — Some whole grain cereal, like that "apple a day," may also keep the doctor away, reports Dr. Dale Romsos, a nutritionist at Michigan State university.

Whole grain cereals, high in fiber, starch and other complex carbohydrates, may be important for keeping blood cholesterol and triglyceride levels low, he said.

Elevated cholesterol and triglyceride — long associated with cardiovascular problems besetting Americans — traditionally has been correlated with large amounts of the simple sugar, sucrose (table sugar) in the American diet.

But, according to Dr. Romsos, Americans presently consume no more sucrose than they did 50 years ago.

"What Americans actually have done," he explained, "is alter the relative amount of sucrose consumed so that it forms a larger portion of our diet in relation to complex carbohydrates."

Until recently, experts were split into two camps," Dr. Ramsos said.

Some believed that low amounts of dietary fiber were the cause of high blood cholesterol and triglycerides, but most scientists blamed high sucrose for the problem.

New experiments show that neither explanation was totally correct.

Both factors contribute to cholesterol-triglyceride troubles and an individual's genetic endowment also has an influence on the effects of diet, Dr. Romsos said.

Increased sucrose, he explained, has little or no effect on cholesterol levels. However, some people, because of genetic factors, display increased blood triglyceride levels when on a high sucrose diet.

Reduced fiber in the diet generally produces increased blood cholesterol levels. It also may contribute to the increasing number of colon cancer cases, he added.

Multiple sclerosis has resisted yielding some of its complex mysteries to the probings of scientific study.

With special persistence, a group of scientists at the Rockefeller University in New York City are studying this disorder. They believe that cellular immune deficiency may, in a measure, be responsible for this disease. Dr. John Zabriskie and Dr. Virginia Utermohlen are trying to increase the level of immunity in the hope that the progress of mutiple sclerosis may be delayed.

In a series of cases already tried, a few patients have shown remakable improvement with this complicated approach to cellular immunity.

A new aersol spray is being tried for the relief of certain types of asthma.

The durg, triamcinlone acetonide, closely resembles one that has been tried effectively in Great Britain.

At the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, Dr. M. Henry Williams is using the drug as a substitute for the cortisone sprays that are now in use.

The side effects of the drug seem to be less than those associated with the use of the cortisone preparation.

A single drop of blood is all that is needed in a test for lead poisoning which has recently been developed at the Bell Laboratories.

This method will replace the current one in use, which requires a large sample of blood and a long delay in obtaining the results.

The test can be done by a nurse or a paramedical assistant. The sample is placed in a glass slide and passed through a special electronic device.

By this method it will be more convenient to screen, at regular intervals, those workers who may be exposed to lead absorption.

It will be a simpler test, too, for children who are suspected of having high concentrations of lead after nibbling paint off walls or furniture.

Whole Grain Cereal Each Day Helps Keep The Doctor Away

EAST LANSING — Some whole grain cereal, like that "apple a day," may also keep the doctor away, reports Dr. Dale Romsos, a nutritionist at Michigan State university.

Whole grain cereals, high in fiber, starch and other complex carbohydrates, may be important for keeping blood cholesterol and triglyceride levels low, he said.

Elevated cholesterol and triglyceride — long associated with cardiovascular problems besetting Americans — traditionally has been correlated with large amounts of the simple sugar, sucrose (table sugar) in the American diet.

But, according to Dr. Romsos, Americans presently consume no more sucrose than they did 50 years ago.

"What Americans actually have done," he explained, "is alter the relative amount of sucrose consumed so that it forms a larger portion of our diet in relation to complex carbohydrates."

Until recently, experts were split into two camps," Dr. Ramsos said.

Some believed that low amounts of dietary fiber were the cause of high blood cholesterol and triglycerides, but most scientists blamed high sucrose for the problem.

New experiments show that neither explanation was totally correct.

Both factors contribute to cholesterol-triglyceride troubles and an individual's genetic endowment also has an influence on the effects of diet, Dr. Romsos said.

Increased sucrose, he explained, has little or no effect on cholesterol levels. However, some people, because of genetic factors, display increased blood triglyceride levels when on a high sucrose diet.

Reduced fiber in the diet generally produces increased blood cholesterol levels. It also may contribute to the increasing number of colon cancer cases, he added.

Health Problems Nothing New

By GENE SCHROEDER
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Studies of an ancient Egyptian mummy has disclosed that some of the health problems blamed on modern industrial society may have been around some 2,700 years ago.

MANY HATS: Among the many hats Henry Kissinger wears as Secretary of State and the nation's top diplomat is a cowboy Stetson he dons during a speech in Houston.

In a scientific paper on their findings, a group of researchers from various fields reported evidence Friday that such arterial diseases as arteriosclerosis were common in ancient Egypt.

Although the cause of such diseases are still unknown, it "is clear that arterial disease was common... in former times," they said.

"Whatever the cause, it is an ancient one, and not something that has appeared recently, such as the stress and strain of modern life or modern diet."

Among other findings from the series of tests conducted on the mummy—dubbed "Pum II"—was evidence of silicosis of the lungs.

"Air pollution is not new," the scientists declared. "Ancient human remains from widely separated locales have contained carbon deposits in the lungs similar to those seen in Pum II."

The autopsy on the mummy, borrowed from the Philadelphia Art Museum, was performed in 1973 at Wayne State University here as part of a seminar on death and disease in Ancient Egypt.

Since then, the well-preserved mummy has been subjected to intensive research by pathologists, physiologists, anthropologists, radiologists and Egyptologists.

"A mummy can be a scientific treasure chest," the researchers explained, "but to unlock its secrets, a multi-disciplinary approach is needed."

Their report said that the nature of diseases prevalent thousands of years ago was not only of academic interest.

"In many instances, the eradication of a disease may not be achieved until the way in which it evolved has been determined," it said.

The researchers noted that some carbon deposits found in ancient human remains "presumably resulted from inhaling smoke from fires." They said that carbon itself causes very little damage to lungs unless accompanied by such toxic substances as silica.

"...Pulmonary silicosis is common in miners, quarry workers and potters and may produce considerable morbidity and mortality," the researchers noted.

"The hands of Pum II are not those of a manual worker, so his silicosis is more likely due to the inhaling of sand during the sand storms common in Egypt."

The researchers on the project were volunteers, donating their time because of interest in the subject, and no direct funding was available.

Money For Welfare

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — House Speaker Bobby Crim said Friday he is hopeful the federal government will release quickly $60 million dollars in deferred welfare payments for Michigan.

The deferrals resulted from late filing by state officials of forms required by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare before federal funds are released. Crim and other state officials met with HEW Secretary Casper Weinberger on Thursday about the problem.

Crim said Weinberger agreed to investigate personally decisions by HEW's regional office which withheld the funds.

"There seems to be some consternation on the part of the secretary about why the regional office is handling these deferrals as they are, tying up our funds for sometimes two years or more," Crim said. "I think now they will be taken care of."

State government leaders emphasized to Michigan's congressional delegation the urgency of a federal extension of unemployment benefits. Crim said that without an additional 13 weeks of benefits, the state will have to spend an extra $50 million-$100 million in the next fiscal year in welfare benefits.

PBB CONTAMINATION

Study Reveals No Dangerous Products

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Friday its studies of PBB stock and poultry contaminations reveals no dangerous products on the market and no related human illnesses.

An extensive study by toxicologists of contaminated herds and a health study of indirect human exposure will be completed, analyzed and released within four or five weeks, an FDA official said.

Some have questioned whether FDA guidelines on contamination are strict enough, while there also have been reports of illnesses from people who ate products from herds contaminated below legal levels.

Detroit FDA Director Alan Hoeting said "the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) is unable at this time to confirm any instance of human disease traceable to the 1973 incident."

Polybrominated biphenyl (PBB), a poisonous, fire-retardant chemical, was introduced into Michigan feed stocks in 1973 when it was mistaken for a feed supplement at the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Hoeting said the FDA is confident that all dairy, meat and egg products meeting the agency's guidelines for PBB are safe for human consumption."

He said state and federal authorities "do not know of any food in commercial channels which is above the 0.3 parts per million limit on PBB for milk and meat and 0.05 parts per millilion in eggs.

"On the basis of the best knowledge available, the FDA is confident that the present guideline for PBB provides the necessary margin for human safety," said Hoeting.

The CDC conducted a preliminary review of data krom a health survey of Michigan resident, he said.

He said "three teams of veterinary toxicologists under FDA leadership are in Michigan now surveying health status of exposed herds. This study and anylysis of the human health survey will be completed as soon as possible.

The Michigan Chemical Co. of St. Louis, Mich. manufactured both PBB and the fertilizer and the PBB was mistakenly shipped to the Farm Bureau Services, which mixed it with its feed.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration has since set 0.3 parts per million as a guideline for PBB.

Patrick Henry's Kin Snubbed

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Patrick Henry's great-great-great grandson wasn't invited to the 200th anniversary observance of his ancestor's famed "liberty or death" speech. Since he hasn't been invited to watch the by-invitation-only re-enactment of the speech at St. John's Church Sunday, James Marshall Henry III says he'll pay $1 to attend a reenactment later the same day at the Richmond Coliseum. Henry says he didn't ask for an invitation to the 350-seat church where Patrick Henry asked for "liberty or death" on March 23, 1775, and a spokesman for the sponsoring Richmond Independence Bicentennial Commission said "there was no conscientious effort" to invite descendants of Patrick Henry to the event. He added there would be no way to reach all of the descendants.

UNINVITED: James Marshall Henry III, 31, holds son J. M. IV, 2, outside historic St. John's Church in Richmond, Va., where Henry's great-great-great grandfather, Patrick Henry, made his "liberty or death" speech March 23, 1775. Although a descendant of the colonial orator, Henry hasn't been invited to attend the 200th anniversary observance at the church this coming Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

Michigan Common Cause Pushes Reform Proposal

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Campaign financing, lobbyist disclosure, conflict of interest and a political ethics commission are necessary components of political reform in Michigan, a citizens lobby said Friday.

Common Cause of Michigan said it would consider postponing a scheduled petition drive to place such reform on the ballot only if the state legislature begins action on all of them.

Common Cause has declared its intention to launch a statewide petition drive April 7 to put its political reform proposal to the voters unless the legislature begins action on a similar measure.

Leading lawmakers have been discussing what reform they believe the legislature should pursue. But Common Cause warned it would go ahead with its drive if the legislature fails to include all the parts it believes are important.

"We are delighted by indications from state legislative leaders of both parties that they are seriously considering passing a meaningful political reform bill this spring," said Susan Rennels, chairman of Common Cause in the state.

"We would view any move to separate out either the campaign finance, lobbyist disclosre, conflict of interest or political ethics commission parts of the reform bill as an attempt to subvert the entire proposal."

Ms. Rennels also said Common Cause insists the legislation be passed to apply to the 1976 election.

Patrick Henry's Kin Snubbed

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Patrick Henry's great-greatgreat grandson wasn't invited to the 200th anniversary observance of his ancestor's famed "liberty or death" speech. Since he hasn't been invited to watch the by-invitation-only re-enactment of the speech at St. John's Church Sunday, James Marshall Henry III says he'll pay $1 to attend a reenactment later the same day at the Richmond Coliseum. Henry says he didn't ask for an invitation to the 350-seat church where Patrick Henry asked for "liberty or death" on March 23, 1775, and a spokesman for the sponsoring Richmond Independence Bicentennial Commission said "there was no conscientious effort" to invite descendants of Patrick Henry to the event. He added there would be no way to reach all of the descendants.

State Community Colleges Aided By Court Ruling

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan legislature cannot set tuition rates for the state's community colleges, a Macomb County Circuit Court judge has ruled.

The decision by Judge Hunter Stair was hailed by one community college president as giving the state's 29 community colleges the same right as state universities to set fees.

The decision announced Thursday dealt with Macomb County Community College. Its president, Dr. John Dimitry, said the decision also would save $450,000 in possible tuition refunds.

The ruling came in a class action suit filed by former MCC student, Anthony Kowalski, 22, of Warren.

He contended he was overcharged during one year's enrollment.

Kowalski, who now is a Warren fireman, asked for a $1.50 refund on each of 36 credit hours of classes he took during 1972-73 school year when the MCC Board of Trustees raised tuition beyond the level established by the legislature.

Dimitry said the college board set a rate of $11.50 a credit hour that year even through the law set community college tuition at $10 an hour. The law recently was changed to allow tuition of up to $14 per credit hour.

He said every one of the 18,000 students attending MCC that year would have been eligible for refund had Kowalski won his case.

Kowalski's attorney said he would appeal the decision.

The state Community College Association backed MCC in contesting the lawsuit, estimating that $5 million in refunds might have had to be made throughout Michigan, Dimitry said.

Judge Stair ruled that community colleges have independent authority to set tuition rates under the 1963 state constitution.

Court cases through the years, Stair said, have held that such authority includes the right to set tuition.

Dimitry said the decision "opens up room for maneuverability we didn't have before."

U-M Hospital Rates Increased

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An average $10 per-day increase on room service rates at the University of Michigan Hospital was approved Friday by the U-M Board of Regents to take effect April 1.

The lowest rate, for a ward location, will be $93 a day.

In requesting the increases, hospital officials cited increasing major operating costs caused by tripling of malpractice insurance as well as increases in expenses and inflation.

They noted that the premium for malpractice insurance has tripled, an increase of more than $300,000.

Regents also reacted to reports of student housing shortages by issuing a statement that enough housing remains available in Ann Arbor. They asked that a housing study be completed by April 11.

And the governing board established a discount tuition plan at the U-M Dearborn campus which is designed to get more students to take summer classes.

Dearborn officials said a full-time student will pay summer tuition of $112 instead of the normal $143. U-M will lose money on the deal unless more students enroll for summer classes than usual.

At U-M Hospital, Regents said the new daily service charge is still equal to those of major Detroit hospitals. Single room charges will now range from $105 and $109 daily.

New semi-private rates will be $100 to $103, while ward rates will be $93 to $100 daily.

Stressing that no increase in the university's Ann Arbor enrollment is planned for the next school year, the regents approved a statement on housing.

Last week a lottery was held among students in the traditional dorms to determine which could return to the residence halls next year as rooms were set aside for incoming freshman.

Of the 4,169 current U-M students who participated in the dorm lotteries, 1,207 lost and will have to seek private housing.

State Community Colleges Aided By Court Ruling

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan legislature cannot set tuition rates for the state's community colleges, a Macomb County Circuit Court judge has ruled.

The decision by Judge Hunter Stair was hailed by one community college president as giving the state's 29 community colleges the same right as state universities to set fees.

The decision announced Thursday dealt with Macomb County Community College. Its president, Dr. John Dimitry, said the decision also would save $450,000 in possible tuition refunds.

The ruling came in a class action suit filed by former MCC student, Anthony Kowalski, 22, of Warren.

He contended he was overcharged during one year's enrollment.

Kowalski, who now is a Warren fireman, asked for a $1.50 refund on each of 36 credit hours of classes he took during 1972-73 school year when the MCC Board of Trustees raised tuition beyond the level established by the legislature.

Dimitry said the college board set a rate of $11.50 a credit hour that year even through the law set community college tuition at $10 an hour. The law recently was changed to allow tuition of up to $14 per credit hour.

He said every one of the 18,000 students attending MCC that year would have been eligible for refund had Kowalski won his case.

Kowalski's attorney said he would appeal the decision.

The state Community College Association backed MCC in contesting the lawsuit, estimating that $5 million in refunds might have had to be made throughout Michigan, Dimitry said.

Judge Stair ruled that community colleges have independent authority to set tuition rates under the 1963 state constitution.

Court cases through the years, Stair said, have held that such authority includes the right to set tuition.

Dimitry said the decision "opens up room for maneuverability we didn't have before."

U-M Hospital Rates Increased

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An average $10 per-day increase on room service rates at the University of Michigan Hospital was approved Friday by the U-M Board of Regents to take effect April 1.

The lowest rate, for a ward location, will be $93 a day.

In requesting the increases, hospital officials cited increasing major operating costs caused by tripling of malpractice insurance as well as increases in expenses and inflation.

They noted that the premium for malpractice insurance has tripled, an increase of more than $300,000.

Regents also reacted to reports of student housing shortages by issuing a statement that enough housing remains available in Ann Arbor. They asked that a housing study be completed by April 11.

And the governing board established a discount tuition plan at the U-M Dearborn campus which is designed to get more students to take summer classes.

Dearborn officials said a full-time student will pay summer tuition of $112 instead of the normal $143. U-M will lose money on the deal unless more students enroll for summer classes than usual.

At U-M Hospital, Regents said the new daily service charge is still equal to those of major Detroit hospitals. Single room charges will now range from $105 and $109 daily.

New semi-private rates will be $100 to $103, while ward rates will be $93 to $100 daily.

Stressing that no increase in the university's Ann Arbor enrollment is plapned for the next school year, the regents approved a statement on housing.

Capitol Bat Warriors Now A Little More Discreet

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — By craning their necks to a spot high above the clock in the governor's office, tourists can glimpse the scars of a battle with a bat a year ago.

Chipped paint in at least six spots reminds executive office staffers of the day workmen swirling a forest of long poles successfully clobbered the little intruder on his unscheduled flight.

Subsequent bat visitors have been handled more tactfully, says George Weeks, Gov. William Milliken's press aide.

A month ago when Phyllis Dell, Milliken's personal secretary, opened the governor's inner office door, a bat sailed out. The creature was apprehended, carried from the building and released without disrupting much state government, Weeks said.

Two weeks ago while Milliken and budget director Gerald Miller were huddled in conference, they spotted another bat in Milliken's office. It was settled in a corner on the floor by the governor's desk.

Milliken and State Police Trooper Jerry Allaire covered the bat with an upside down wastepaper basket, slid a square of cardboard under the animal, attached the cardboard to the waste basket with tape and rubberbands and, saw to it the bat was removed and released unharmed. Weeks said.

Disagreement over the income tax increase was no strain for Republican state Reps. John Engler and Colleen House, who are to be married April 5.

House of Bay City was for it. Engler of Mount Pleasant was against it.

"We didn't discuss to any extent how we were going to vote," said House, a freshman who turned 23 Monday. "I told my constituents that if they chose to repeal the sales tax on food and drugs, I would vote to increase the income tax to make up for the lost money."

Engler, 26, now in his third House term, "has been here longer and he said he'd rather see cuts made from the budget instead of raising revenues," House said.

Children Get A Big Kick From Basement 'Airplane'

By BARBARA P. SMITH

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — What started as a joke five or six years ago is now an airplane cockpit in Lynn Matzen's basement.

He and his friends constructed what he dubs "a poor man's version" of a Link trainer (a simulated-flight cockpit used to train pilots) out of lumber, screws and paraphernalia from World War II airplanes. The project began simply enough.

Matzen's son, Bob, now 11, was such a fanatic about airplanes that he had his first flying lesson at 5. His father, general manager of Mechanical Products Division of Aiken Industries Inc., received a C.O.D. package of parts unexpectedly from a friend who had found the parts at a West Coast airplane junkyard.

Suddenly in possession of a seat, throttle, dash panel and rudders, Matzen decided to build a wooden platform where Bob could sit and pretend he was flying.

"But then the imagination started to take over," says Matzen.

"On Christmas Day, Santa Claus brought a load of lumber. I built the platform, and it looked kind of awkward, so people started saying, 'Why don't you round off the end?' and 'Why not put a cover overhead?'"

Next Matzen acquired a wooden propeller from a drone designed for target practice. It had been in a box for 32 years.

"The thing progressed by fits and starts," Matzen recalls. "I worked tremendously on building the first piece of structure, and then it sat for a year. We were renting a house...and I had to be sure I could get it out of the house when we moved."

Matzen estimates that about 15 people worked on the cockpit for a total of 700 man-hours.

"I'd say about 500 of these hours were mine," he says. "The whole thing cost me between $100 and $200."

As the project grew, so did Matzen's family. Jeff, 6, and Jill, 2, now put in as much "flying time" as Bob. Mrs. Matzen says that neighborhood children, predominantly boys, ask to play in the basement even when the Matzen youngsters are not at home.

Matzen emphasizes that the cockpit was "built for the kids, not the adults."

Sharp edges are covered, and the covering can be mended with electrical tape if children punch holes it.

The propeller, turned by what might be an old sewing machine motor, has two switches so that it cannot be started accidentally and is covered with foam to guard against collisions with small heads.

Home Industry Gets Boost By House Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle-income Americans would be able to obtain federally subsidized mortgages under a House-passed bill aimed at stimulating the depressed housing industry.

The House passed the socalled Emergency Middle Income Housing Act Friday and sent it to the Senate by a 259-106 vote, despite warnings of a veto by President Ford. The vote margin was slightly above the two-thirds majority which would be needed to override a veto.

House Banking Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., had pushed the legislation as part of the Democratic leadership's economic revival program, saying that the economy will improve only when the homebuilding industry is helped out of its depression.

Democrats estimated that the $1.3 billion in subsidies on a $12 billion portfolio of houses would spur construction of about 400,000 new houses, putting hard-hit construction workers back to work.

Before the final vote, the House rejected, 242 to 126, a Republican substitute to extend existing federal programs that funnel more money into private mortgage lending markets.

Republicans said the housing industry appears to be recuperating on its own but the promise of cheap mortgage money sometime in the future would thwart its recovery.

But the Democrats said their subsidy plan was a better way to revive the homebuilding industry and help middle-class families buy homes.

The bill would lower mortgage interest rates temporarily to 6 per cent, with the subsidy ending after six years, or to 7 per cent for the life of the loan.

Of the $1.3 billion, 70 per cent would go for subsidies on purchases of newly constructed homes, with the remaining funds permitted for sales of the backlog of new but unsold homes and the existing stock of used homes.

Eligible buyers could earn no more than 120 per cent of their area's median income — with the average such income ranging between $15,000 and $18,000 — and could choose a home valued at no more than $38,000.

Ten per cent of the $1.3 billion in subsidy funds would be allocated to buyers in high-cost cities for purchases of homes valued up to $42,000.

However, in such cities as Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Detroit, New York, Seattle, Los Angeles, Houston and San Francisco, the median price for a new home exceeded $42,000 last winter.

Right now, for a person buying a $20,000 house with a 30-year mortgage at the current average competitive interest rate of 8.5 per cent, the monthly payments would be $153.70.

The bill would subsidize the interest payment, dropping it to 6 per cent interest and making the buyer's monthly payments $120. The subsidy would decline after the third year and end entirely after the sixth. The buyer then would have to pay current market interest for the balance of the loan.

Another option would reduce the interest rate to 7 per cent for the life of the loan, or a monthly payment of $33.70 on a 30-year $20,000 loan.

It's News TODAY.

Ad Agency Carries On

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advertising agency whose previous contract award is under investigation will continue to promote the Army's recruitment program. Army officials disclosed Friday that the service had chosen N.W. Ayer AHB International of New York over three other agencies for a new $40 million contract for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Ayer had held the contract on a yearly renewal basis since 1972 until last fall when the Army, motivated primarily by controversy over alleged contract award improprieties involving senior Pentagon officials, opened it to bidders.

Community Backs Judge

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — A district court judge who began carrying a gun because of threats against his life has received offers of help from citizens who say they'll use guns, dogs and posses to protect him. Sam Sullivan says he has received five death threats in the last five days, and authorities say they believe the threats stem from a drug raid last weekend which resulted in nine arrests. Sullivan, 65, signed the search warrants for the raid. He has armed himself and keeps guns in his home, which is patroled by police during the night, and in his car. Among citizens offering help were an elderly man who wanted to stand watch at the county courthouse with a shotgun and two sisters who said they would bring their dogs and a posse to provide protection. Sullivan, who has received numerous threats since 1948 when he sentenced three Atoka County men to death, says he is not worried about an attack because "I believe what is to be will be. I believe the day I was born The Almighty knew the day I would die."

Farm Bill Coming Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to give emergency aid to farmers is heading for the Senate floor amid conflicting claims about its cost to consumers. The Senate Agriculture Committee approved the bill Friday after making only a few changes in the version passed a day earlier by the House. One change is to extend the life of the proposed legislation from one year to three years.

Kissinger Meets Israelis

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli negotiators early today ended a two-hour session with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on a possible Sinai agreement saying "basic problems" were still unsettled. The talks were to resume at 6 p.m. (noon EDT). After a 3½-hour cabinet meeting Friday night followed by the meeting with Kissinger, Defense Minister Shimon Peres admitted there were problems but added: "Let's be a little patient." The key unresolved issue appeared to be how far Israel should pull back on the Sinai peninsula and whether it will return to Egypt the strategic Gidi and Mitla passes and the Abu Rudeis oil fields.

Ethiopia Monarchy Banned

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The leftist military government has abolished Ethiopia's 3,000-year-old monarchy which began with the Queen of Sheba and ended with 82-year-old Emperor Haile Selassie. The government in a brief statement broadcast Friday said all royal rank was abolished, including that of Selassie's oldest son, Crown Prince Asfa Wossen, 56, who was named figurehead king-designate on the Sept. 12 overthrow of his father. The military advisory council promised Ethiopians they will soon be given the opportunity to select their own form of government. Selassie is ill in Switzerland.

50% IN 'NEAR FUTURE'

Cancer Survival Rate Growing

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The president of the American Cancer Society says doctors may be saving the lives of half the nation's cancer victims within the near future.

Dr. George P. Rosemond told a society seminar for science writers Friday that the predicted 50 per cent success rate could come within five years but is by no means a sure thing.

"It might not be one in every two, but it should be better than one in three," he said.

The society says doctors currently save one of every three patients stricken with cancer.

The society has been criticized recently in a variety of published reports charging that it has juggled statistics to generate optimism about the government's multimillion dollar war on cancer.

Science journalist Daniel S. Greenberg wrote in articles for The Washington Post and for Columbia Journalism Review that the society is correct in saying that there has been substantial progress in cancer treatment since the 1940s. But he maintained that most of that progress was made before 1955.

Since then, survival rates have reached a plateau and have even worsened in some cases, Greenberg wrote.

Survival rates are based on the percentage of cancer patients who live five years or more after discovery of the disease.

Reports such as Greenberg's "are good. They're healthy. They're accurate. But they stop short," said Frank J. Rauscher, director of the National Cancer Institute which directs the three-year-old federal effort.

Rauscher said the latest figures on which Greenberg's criticism is based are for 1968. He said the national cancer program was implemented in 1972 to speed research results for treatment of patients.

The full effect of the program will not be felt for several years because of the time it takes to spread new treatment methods to doctors outside special research centers, he said.

The National Cancer Institute will release full information on survival rates since the 1969 studies within the year.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of the institute's cancer treatment division, said the plateau in survival rates marked the end of treating cancer as a local disease in the body.

"What appeared to be regional disease often wasn't," he said. "Tumors recurred and patients died with advanced disease. With the exception of brain tumors, patients never died of localized cancer."

He said the emphasis now is on weapons, mainly chemicals, that attack the disease throughout the body and keep it from spreading.

Drugs that inhibit cancer systemically are now showing success in treating some of the more common cancers such as breast, ovary and colon cancer, he said. These types of cancers are treated mainly by surgery, "but because of their tendency to recur, systemic treatment holds great promise," he said.

Dispute Closes School

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — A Lutheran elementary parochial school was closed Friday in a continuing dispute including accusations of child abuse and expulsions.

Trinity Lutheran school was closed following an unsuccessful meeting of parents at the school gymnasium Thursday.

More than 75 people, mostly parents, showed up to meet with school board members and the parish council, but most left when parish council members refused to enter the gymnasium.

Home Industry Gets Boost By House Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle-income Americans would be able to obtain federally subsidized mortgages under a House-passed bill aimed at stimulating the depressed housing industry.

The House passed the socalled Emergency Middle Income Housing Act Friday and sent it to the Senate by a 259-106 vote, despite warnings of a veto by President Ford. The vote margin was slightly above the two-thirds majority which would be needed to override a veto.

House Banking Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., had pushed the legislation as part of the Democratic leadership's economic revival program, saying that the economy will improve only when the homebuilding industry is helped out of its depression.

Democrats estimated that the $1.3 billion in subsidies on a $12 billion portfolio of houses would spur construction of about 400,000 new houses, putting hard-hit construction workers back to work.

Before the final vote, the House rejected, 242 to 126, a Republican substitute to extend existing federal programs that funnel more money into private mortgage lending markets.

Republicans said the housing industry appears to be recuperating on its own but the promise of cheap mortgage money sometime in the future would thwart its recovery.

But the Democrats said their subsidy plan was a better way to revive the homebuilding industry and help middle-class families buy homes.

The bill would lower mortgage interest rates temporarily to 6 per cent, with the subsidy ending after six years, or to 7 per cent for the life of the loan.

Of the $1.3 billion, 70 per cent would go for subsidies on purchases of newly constructed homes, with the remaining funds permitted for sales of the backlog of new but unsold homes and the existing stock of used homes.

Eligible buyers could earn no more than 120 per cent of their area's median income — with the average such income ranging between $15,000 and $18,000 — and could choose a home valued at no more than $38,000.

Ten per cent of the $1.3 billion in subsidy funds would be allocated to buyers in high-cost cities for purchases of homes valued up to $42,000.

However, in such cities as Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Detroit, New York, Seattle, Los Angeles, Houston and San Francisco, the median price for a new home exceeded $42,000 last winter.

Right now, for a person buying a $20,000 house with a 30-year mortgage at the current average competitive interest rate of 8.5 per cent, the monthly payments would be $153.70.

The bill would subsidize the interest payment, dropping it to 6 per cent interest and making the buyer's monthly payments $120. The subsidy would decline after the third year and end entirely after the sixth. The buyer then would have to pay current market interest for the balance of the loan.

Another option would reduce the interest rate to 7 per cent for the life of the loan, or a monthly payment of $33.70 on a 30-year $20,000 loan.

Ad Agency Carries On

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advertising agency whose previous contract award is under investigation will continue to promote the Army's recruitment program. Army officials disclosed Friday that the service had chosen N.W. Ayer AHB International of New York over three other agencies for a new $40 million contract for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Ayer had held the contract on a yearly renewal basis since 1972 until last fall when the Army, motivated primarily by controversy over alleged contract award improprieties involving senior Pentagon officials, opened it to bidders.

Community Backs Judge

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — A district court judge who began carrying a gun because of threats against his life has received offers of help from citizens who say they'll use guns, dogs and posses to protect him. Sam Sullivan says he has received five death threats in the last five days, and authorities say they believe the threats stem from a drug raid last weekend which resulted in nine arrests. Sullivan, 65, signed the search warrants for the raid. He has armed himself and keeps guns in his home, which is patroled by police during the night, and in his car. Among citizens offering help were an elderly man who wanted to stand watch at the county courthouse with a shotgun and two sisters who said they would bring their dogs and a posse to provide protection. Sullivan, who has received numerous threats since 1948 when he sentenced three Atoka County men to death, says he is not worried about an attack because "I believe what is to be will be. I believe the day I was born The Almighty knew the day I would die."

Parolee Held In Girl's Death

FARMINGTON, Mich. (AP)-A 20 - year - old man on parole from Southern Michigan Prison in a rape case, was held today in the slaying of an 11 - year old Detroit girl whose body was found in a Farmington Township pond Thursday.

Oakland County medical examiner Dr. John Burton said petite Kelly Curley had been sexually assaulted and beaten. An autopsy showed her neck had been twisted violently cutting off air and causing her death, he said.

Detroit police homicide officers joined Farmington Township police in the investigation since it was not clear immediately where death occurred.

Mrs. Patricia Curley, mother of the slain girl, reported the girl missing Wednesday after the girl failed to appear for classes at Houghten Elementary School.

The name of the man was withheld pending his appearance in 47th District Court in Farmington Township later today. Authorities said they would release a statement on the case at 3 p.m.

Police said the break came when Detroit homicide officers located a neighbor who had seen a green stake truck in the vicinity of the Curley home Tuesday afternoon.

The neighbor noted several characteristics of the truck, plus the fact it had a bent license tag. State Police broadcast an alarm for the truck Friday afternon. The vehicle was located several hours later near a motel in Clinton and the man was taken into custody.

He was returned to custody of Oakland County authorities today.

A Funny Thing Happened...

Burglar 'Won' Contest

HONOLULU (AP) — A local radio station has been inviting listeners to "crack the safe" as part of an advertising promotion and claim $5,900 inside it. The safe made the rounds of advertisers' stores and listeners got the chance to try to open it. A burglar took the invitation literally. Police reported that someone broke into a car dealership this week and took station KGMB's safe.

Students Trust Computer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Twenty-five students at the California Institute of Technology have prepared 1.26 million entry forms for a $50,000 contest sponsored by a hamburger chain. The students say that, based on a computer estimate, they believe they have better than a 50-50 chance to win a large share of the prize money. They figured that if one out of every 10 persons in Southern California entered the contest, that would be one million entrants. So they programmed the computer to fill their names in on entry blanks and delivered 40,000 of them Friday to each of more than 25 area McDonald's restaurants. Organizers John Denker, 20, a senior electric engineering student, and Dave Novikoff, 21, a senior in math and physics, said it took three days to print the entries on the computer and three days to cut the papers to the proper size.

They Labor In Unison

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Grazia Quattrocchi, giving birth to her 12th child last week, became a grandmother at the same time and in the same room. While 49-year-old Mrs. Quattrocchi was laboring on one bed, her oldest daughter Elvira, 19, was giving birth to her first child on an adjoining bed in the three-room apartment they share in a slum area of this Sicilian city. Both gave birth to 8.4-pound boys. A midwife shuttled from one bed to another in what she called the busiest hour in her professional life. The newborn Uncle Luciano and Nephew Natale and their mothers were reported doing well. They raised the population in the apartment to 16.

'Pot' Shipment Thwarted

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — "Save for Bob" was the simple message included with five marijuana cigarettes found in Wednesday's outgoing mail at Southern Michigan Prison. The homemade cigarettes were discovered by an inspector who opened the bulky envelope. A check of the sender's address led to a 26-year-old inmate. No action was taken against him, prison officials said. State Police said incoming cigarettes are not unusual, but it is not often they are sent out.

Smoking CAN Be Hazardous

MORRISTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — Tom Trobaugh filled his briar pipe with tobacco, lit it and walked to the back of his Morristown florist shop. Suddenly, he heard a boom, and a bullet whizzed past his nose and into the ceiling above him. "For a second I didn't know what had happened. I knew it was a bullet, but I couldn't figure it out," said the 54-year-old gun hobbyist after discovering that a .22-caliber round had exploded in the bowl of his pipe. He discovered the shell casing in the pipe and found a hole in the ceiling where the bullet struck. He speculated that the bullet must have slipped into his tobacco pouch from an old jacket pocket. "I've got a bunch of guns, and I just keep the .22 gun at the shop for security. I haven't fired it for years...." Trobaugh, who has been a smoker for 30 years, said, "I believe it when they say smoking can be harmful to your health." But he doesn't plan to quit. "Funny thing is, it didn't hurt the pipe one little bit," he said. "Not even a crack."

Bill May Benefit Chrysler

million by the third quarter, it would get a $75 million credit but it would not get any money this year, he added, explaining that no refund would be made until after final 1975 corporate returns wereb filed sometime in 1976.

By that time, if the firm was making money again, it would be paying taxes and it would all average out, he said.

The tax credit would help us in the next year if we needed it but I don't consider it a tax break -- no way-- for if we make money in 1976, and I assume we will, we will pay the taxes we owe."

Sen.Haft, who generally has voted against corporate tax breaks, voted for thus one, arguing that Chrysler should be allowed to maintain competition in the auto industry and save the jobs of workers.

The measure calls for 25 per cent of the refund tax to be split equally among the firm's shareholders and the SUB or supplemental unemployment benefits program of the auto firm.

Senators Approve Record Cut

difference in the price tags, the Senate bill is vastly different from the House version.

The House bill would provide a smaller rebate on 1974 taxes, a special taxkor single persons and couples too poor to pay income taxes, and tax cuts designed for families with income under $20,000 that do not itemize deductions.

But the Senate increased the amount of the rebates, doubled the size of the special tax break and made it available only to working families, and voted for more tax relief for those taxpayers, especially larger families with less than $20,000 in income who itemize deductions.

Here are other key provisions of the Senate bill:

—$10 billion in rebates on 1974 taxes, between $120 and $240 per family.

—$6.1 billion in relief by providing for the first time an optional $200 - per - person tax credit which is far more valuable generally than the $750 - per - person exemption it could replace. This would benefit 57 million taxpayers, 47 per cent of them in the income brackets between $10,000 and $20,000.

—$2.3 billion in tax cuts this year by lowering by 4 per cent the tax rates on the first $4,000 of taxable income. This would insure virtually every taxpayer a $40 reduction.

—$3.4 billion as an across - the - board $100 bonus this year to every person who receives a Social Security or railroad - retirement - system check.

Parolee Held In Girl's Death

FARMINGTON, Mich. (AP)-A 30 - year - old man, on parole from Southern Michigan Prison in a rape case, was held today in the slaying of an 11 - year old Detroit girl whose body was found in a Farmington Township pond Thursday.

Oakland County medical examiner Dr. John Burton said petite Kelly Curley had been sexually assaulted and beaten. An autopsy showed her neck had been twisted violently cutting off air and causing her death, he said.

Detroit police homicide officers joined Farmington Township police in the investigation since it was not clear immediately where death occurred.

Mrs. Patricia Curley, mother of the slain girl, reported the girl missing Wednesday after the girl failed to appear for classes at Houghten Elementary School.

The name of the man was withheld pending his appearance in 47th District Court in Farmington Township later today. Authorities said they would release a statement on the case at 3 p.m.

Police said the break came when Detroit homicide officers located a neighbor who had seen a green stake truck in the vicinity of the Curley home Tuesday afternoon.

The neighbor noted several characteristice of the truck, plus the fact it had a bent license tag. State Police broadcast an alarm for the truck Friday afternon. The vehicle was located several hours later near a motel in Clinton and the man was taken into custody.

A Funny Thing Happened...

Burglar 'Won' Contest

HONOLULU (AP) — A local radio station has been inviting listeners to "crack the safe" as part of an advertising promotion and claim $5,900 inside it. The safe made the rounds of advertisers' stores and listeners got the chance to try to open it. A burglar took the invitation literally. Police reported that someone broke into a car dealership this week and took station KGMB's safe.

Students Trust Computer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Twenty-five students at the California Institute of Technology have prepared 1.26 million entry forms for a $50,000 contest sponsored by a hamburger chain. The students say that, based on a computer estimate, they believe they have better than a 50-50 chance to win a large share of the prize money. They figured that if one out of every 10 persons in Southern California entered the contest, that would be one million entrants. So they programmed the computer to fill their names in on entry blanks and delivered 40,000 of them Friday to each of more than 25 area McDonald's restaurants. Organizers John Denker, 20, a senior electric engineering student, and Dave Novikoff, 21, a senior in math and physics, said it took three days to print the entries on the computer and three days to cut the papers to the proper size.

They Labor In Unison

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Grazia Quattrocchi, giving birth to her 12th child last week, became a grandmother at the same time and in the same room. While 49-year-old Mrs. Quattrocchi was laboring on one bed, her oldest daughter Elvira, 19, was giving birth to her first child on an adjoining bed in the three-room apartment they share in a slum area of this Sicilian city. Both gave birth to 8.4-pound boys. A midwife shuttled from one bed to another in what she called the busiest hour in her professional life. The newborn Uncle Luciano and Nephew Natale and their mothers were reported doing well. They raised the population in the apartment to 16.

'Pot' Shipment Thwarted

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — 'Save for Bob" was the simple message included with five marijuana cigarettes found in Wednesday's outgoing mail at Southern Michigan Prison. The homemade cigarettes were discovered by an inspector who opened the bulky envelope. A check of the sender's address led to a 26-year-old inmate. No action was taken against him, prison officials said. State Police said incoming cigarettes are not unusual, but it is not often they are sent out.

Smoking CAN Be Hazardous

MORRISTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — Tom Trobaugh filled his briar pipe with tobacco, lit it and walked to the back of his Morristown florist shop. Suddenly, he heard a boom, and a bullet whizzed past his nose and into the ceiling above him. "For a second I didn't know what had happened. I knew it was a bullet, but I couldn't figure it out," said the 54-year-old gun hobbyist after discovering that a .22-caliber round had exploded in the bowl of his pipe. He discovered the shell casing in the pipe and found a hole in the ceiling where the bullet struck. He speculated that the bullet must have slipped into his tobacco pouch from an old jacket pocket. "I've got a bunch of guns, and I just keep the .22 gun at the shop for security. I haven't fired it for years...." Trobaugh, who has been a smoker for 30 years, said, "I believe it when they say smoking can be harmful to your health." But he doesn't plan to quit. "Funny thing is, it didn't hurt the pipe one little bit," he said. "Not even a crack."

Bill May Benefit Chrysler

million by the third quarter, it would get a $75 million credit but it would not get any money this year, he added, explaining that no refund would be made until after final 1975 corporate returns wereb filed sometime in 1976.

By that time, if the firm was making money again, it would be paying taxes and it would all average out, he said.

The tax credit would help us in the next year if we needed it but I don't consider it a tax break -- no way-- for if we make money in 1976, and I assume we will, we will pay the taxes we owe."

Sen. Hart, who generally has voted against corporate tax breaks, voted for thus one, arguing that Chrysler should be allowed to maintain competition in the auto industry and save the jobs of workers.

The measure calls for 25 per cent of the refund tax to be split equally among the firm's shareholders and the SUB or supplemental unemployment benefits program of the auto firm.

Senators Approve Record Cut

difference in the price tags, the Senate bill is vastly different from the House version.

The House bill would provide a smaller rebate on 1974 taxes, a special taxkor single persons and couples too poor to pay income taxes, and tax cuts designed for families with income under $20,000 that do not itemize deductions.

But the Senate increased the amount of the rebates, doubled the size of the special tax break and made it available only to working families, and voted for more tax relief for those taxpayers, especially larger families with less than $20,000 in income who itemize deductions.

Here are other key provisions of the Senate bill:

—$10 billion in rebates on 1974 taxes, between $120 and $240 per family.

—$6.1 billion in relief by providing for the first time an optional $200 - per - person tax credit which is far more valuable generally than the $750 - per - person exemption it could replace. This would benefit 57 million taxpayers, 47 per cent of them in the income brackets between $10,000 and $20,000.

—$2.3 billion in tax cuts this year by lowering by 4 per cent the tax rates on the first $4,000 of taxable income. This would insure virtually every taxpayer a $40 reduction.

—$1.5 billion as a "work bonus" for working families with less than $8,000 in income, an innovation designed to offset what many consider the regressive Social Security tax. This would provide a maximum $400 tax cut.

—$1 billion for a tax credit for persons who buy new homes between March 13 and Dec. 31 this year. The credit would equal 5 per cent of the home's purchase price, up to a maximum credit of $2,000.

—An additional $150 million to $200 million in extra emergency aid for persons who have been out of a job for a year.

Bullwinkle is the brother of Milton, the musk ox that was sent to the Peking Zoo along with a female companion named Mathilda as a good will gesture during the administration of former President Richard M. MEA CRITICIZES STRIKE LEGISLATION

Leader Says Union Is Drafting Own Bill, Seeking Sponsors

By MARY SCHEIER
ASSOCIATED Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — School strike legislation in the House is "the worst piece of labor legislation in 40 years," says Michigan's largest teacher union.

Norman Coleman, executive secretary of the 84,000-member Michigan Education Association, said the MEA in conjunction with other labor groups is drafting a separate bill and seeking sponsors.

The two-billpackage in question was created by a special House committee chaired by Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City.

"The problem is lay people who know nothing about labor conditions wrote the bill," Coleman said. "The labor attorneys who write to us say the Keith bill is not even amendable. You can't fix it by amending it."

One Keith bill provides that school districts be fined as much money as teachers if a legal strike prevents the district from providing the minimum 180 days of instruction required by law.

The other bill is the one bearing the brunt of attack from the labor coalition. Speaking for them, Coleman said the bill is just too complicated and involved.

That bill gives teachers the right to strike after a lengthy negotiation impasse, and arbitration procedure has been exhausted.

Arbitration begins if either side requests it. An arbitrator's decision is final and binding on both parties if either side accepts it. One clause the MEA says is too vague and broad says school districts can be required to negotiate on powers granted them by law.

The bill guarantees school starting and closing dates and certain school holidays. It also sets criteria under which either side can go to court to appeal an arbitrator's decision.

"Our bill does not say you've got to learn to fly before you strike," Coleman said. "Under the Keith bill, if you have a strike it won't be until between November and February, at the time when everybody would least want the school program disrupted."

The labor coalition bill, Coleman said, would allow teachers to strike after meeting criteria in the bill he said he didn't want to disclose.

"On Sept. 1, if both sides agree they don't want to bargain any longer they can voluntarily go to arbitration. If the school board doesn't want voluntary arbitration, teachers will go on strike," he said.

"Our bill gives the courts the right to order arbitration. If they order you have no choice but to accept it. Our bill does not have penalties and does not limit the scope of bargaining. It sets up some criteria both parties must adhere to in bargaining and establishes a balance of power between employe and employer."

Keith has said his committee's bills do set up this same kind of balance of power and contain "incentive after incentive for good-faith bargaining."

Coleman said the Keith bill provision specifying when arbitrators' decisions can be appealed in court "makes no sense. Under current law you can appeal an arbitration award anytime you want to the court. But if you encourage it by putting it in the bill, you're going to have every other one appealed."

Said Keith, "I feel the committee did a tremendous job. I kind of expected we'd get shot at, I didn't expect that kind of shot. I expected constructive criticism, constructive amendments."

He expressed worry that if too many opposing bills representing "the extremes" are introduced no measure for improving the teacher strike situation will get passed.

"You can't write a bill that's Santa Claus to everybody," Coleman added.

Business Brokers Told How They Can Aid State

Howard Cross, deputy director of the state Office of Economic Expansion, detailed in St. Joseph Friday for Michigan business brokers how they can help improve Michigan's economy.

Cross told 125 members attending the spring seminar of Partridge & Associates, Inc. yesterday the current economic situation seems to have leveled off in this, the end of the first quarter of 1975. Cross's office is part of the state Department of Commerce.

Cross noted the inflation rate has started to drop and other factors including lower interest rates and diminishing inventories are positive signs. He cautioned, however, that there would not be much of an upturn before the fourth quarter.

The business broker among others can take advantage of the new Department of Commerce agency. He said the business-man-run unit is the place to call on for help in solving manpower, financing, taxation, energy, utility, transportation, environmental and site problems.

Cross said business brokers can be a great help by passing along information on industrial prospects interested in coming to Michigan.

Members of business broker firms ranging from Ironwood in the Upper Peninsula to metropolitan Detroit attended the spring seminar at St. Joseph Holiday Inn. Host for the affair

Watervliet Fire Officials Questioning 'Pump Repair'

WATERVLIET — A $1,343 bill for a fire truck ordered by Watervliet officials and then rejected includes a $121 charge for "pump repair" fire board officials are questioning.

Watervliet Fire Chief Paul Hintz said the pump was not used while the truck was in Watervliet for three days.

He said the pump repair charge, and other items on the bill, are being reviewed by township and city officials.

The bill is from Pierce Manufacturing, Inc., of Appleton, Wis. Delegates from the fire board went to the firm in October and signed an order for the $40,000 lime-green truck.

The Watervliet city commission and Watervliet township board, areas served by the fire department, subsequently voted in December against financing the purchase of the truck.

The fire board delegation ordered the truck without prior approval of the fire board, the city commission or the township board.

Besides the pump repair charge, other bill items include a cancellation fee of $50; repainting of doors, $100; lettering, $147; return delivery, $55; and interest on outstanding invoice from date of invoice until return of the truck, $821.

A copy of the bill has been released by Robert Flaherty, fire board clerk-treasurer and Watervliet mayor.

Bruins 'Vulnerable' In NCAA Tournament Regional

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Calling second-ranked UCLA "definitely more vulnerable than in the past," Arizona State Coach Ned Wulk hopes to lock the Bruins out of the NCAA championship round for the first time in nearly a decade with a victory in today's Far West Regional final at Portland, Ore.

The Bruins have had to fight for their lives in their first two games of the NCAA tourney. They were taken into overtime before emerging with a 103-91 triumph over Big Ten runnerup Michigan in the first round, and Thursday they struggled to a 67-64 decision over unranked and unheralded Montana of the Big Sky Conference in the Far West Regional semifinal.

Arizona State, meanwhile, qualified for today's Far West final by outrunning rugged Alabama 97-94 and scrappy Nevada-Las Vegas 87-84.

The UCLA-Arizona State winner, as well as the winners of today's three other regional finals, qualifies for the NCAA championship tournament in San Diego March 29 and 31.

"They don't have the dominating figures like they've had in recent years," said Wulk of UCLA, winner of nine of the past 11 NCAA titles and one of the final four teams in each of the past eight seasons.

"Dave Meyers is a bona fide All-American and Ralph Drollinger and Richard Washington have size and talent. But neither has the capability of dominating games like Bill Walton did," explained Wulk, referring to UCLA's star center who graduated last year.

And Meyers is far from full strength. The 6-foot-8 forward has been plagued by leg troubles for the past month, and could manage only 12 points and five rebounds against Montana.

Meanwhile, seventh-ranked Arizona State, like UCLA 25-3, was not exactly overwhelming against Nevada-Las Vegas. The Sun Devils trailed by eight points with 5:53 to go before pulling it out.

"Call me Mr. Lucky," said Wulk after the squeaker Thursday night. "We were most fortunate, and that is an understatment. Our press has to be more effective against UCLA if we're going to win."

The UCLA-Arizona State matchup is the final of today's four regionals.

Earlier, No. 20 Syracuse, 22-7 and upset winner over sixth-ranked North Carolina Thursday night, met No. 17 Kansas State, 20-8, in the Eastern Regional final at Providence, R.I.

In the Mideast Regional at Dayton, Ohio, top-ranked Indiana put its 34-game winning streak on the line against fifth-rated Kentucky, 24-4. The Wildcats were seeking to avenge a 98-74 loss to Indiana early in the regular season.

At Las Cruces, N.M., third-ranked Louisville, 26-2, took on the three-guard offense of Maryland, 24-4 and ranked No. 4, in the Midwest Regional.

Football Playoff Starts This Fall

High School Council Gives OK

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan high school football teams will decide state championships with a playoff this fall, according to Al Bush, director of athletics for the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

Bush said the prep football playoff was approved Friday night in Ann Arbor at a meeting of the MHSAA's Representative Council.

The members were in town for the state basketball championships at the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena Saturday.

The football playoff will follow the format set last fall when the MHSAA conducted a so-called "paper playoff."

Under the playoff format, the state will be divided into four regions in each of four class.

Throughout the regular season, teams will earn points based upon their success against their opponents. They also will earn bonus points based upon the cumulative success of all their opponents during the season.

At the end of the regular season, the team in each region with the most points will be declared the regional winner. Those four teams will then enter the playoffs for the state championship in their respective class.

State prep football squads still will be allowed to play up to nine games, Bush said.

Bush said Upper Peninsula teams, whose seasons generally end two to three weeks ahead of Lower Michigan schools, probably would have to wait and try to keep squads together if they qualifid for the playoffs and wanted to play.

THE WORLD OF Sports

KAMIKAZE KIDS: In a style typical of Oregon's aggressive play, Mike Drummond (10) topples over teammate Greg Ballard in an effort to recover loose ball during quarterfinal action Thursday in New York's Madison Square Garden. Oregon's physical style has earned the team the nickname of "The Kamikaze Kids." (AP Wirephoto)

'Wild Bunch' Exciting NIT Semifinalist

NEW YORK (AP) — When the Oregon Ducks beat you at basketball, they do it literally.

"If we ever have another war, I want them on my side," says Coach Lou Carnesecca of St. John's, whose team—along with Oregon, Providence and Princeton—plays in today's semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

Because of their all-out, courageous style, the Ducks are called "The Kamikaze Kids." Diving for loose balls, barreling into people and busting through press tables, they sometimes spend as much time in the prone position as they do standing up.

It has made the Ducks the most exciting and interesting team to watch in this 38th annual tournament.

"Our opponents say we're crazy," says Ronnie Lee, the Oregon guard who is the ringleader of the Wild Bunch. "The closest to us is the team I played against when I was with a U.S. All-Star team. That was in Russia."

This wildly singular approach is Coach Dick Harter's idea. In fact, when he conducts practices, there's always some time set aside for diving drills.

"We're just not great shooters," explains Lee. "So we have to do everything we can to win. We always play that way. If I'm playing against a little girl, I'll beat her up if I have too."

The gut reaction to this style of play from some opponents is that perhaps the Ducks should have their heads examined. But Stu Jackson doesn't see it that way.

"Some teams complain that we're too physical," says the 6-foot-5 forward. "They say we should be playing football. That's ridiculous. It's unintelligent."

Lee says that no one has been seriously hurt so far—a fact that upsets theories of logic.

"We've had a few bloody noses, but not much more than that," says Lee. "When you're loose like we are, I don't think you can hurt yourself badly."

Pete Carril, whose team faces the "Kamikaze Kids" today in the second semifinal game after the St. John's-Providence meeting, expresses fear and respect.

"They're killers," says Carril. "Sheer brutality. The offensive board work they do scares the hell out of me. They do a hell of a job defensively, too."

Harter doesn't like his team to be called "killers." He prefers the word, "character."

"There's nothing brutal about diving for a loose ball," he says.

Big Barney Holds Lead

Palmer Chasing Leader At Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Big Barney Thompson, who has yet to win in two years of tour activity, had no definite goal going into Saturday's third round of the $150,000 Greater Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament.

"I can't make any predictions. I'll just try to play another good round," said the red-haired, 6-foot-5 Thompson, whose six-under-par 66 gave him the 36-hole lead.

Arnold Palmer, who has won 61 times in 21 years of tour activity, had a very definite goal.

"I've had two rounds that were fair to good," said Palmer. "Now I've got to have two rounds that are really good."

Palmer, still one of the game's great attractions despite his long, frustrating slump, birdied four of five holes at one stretch on his way to a second consecutive 68 that left him three strokes back of Thompson.

"For a while," Palmer said, "I felt like I was going to birdie every hole. And that's the feeling you've got to have."

He said his confidence, at an ebb during his troubles of last season, was building to a peak.

"I've talked of confidence all year long," he said. "I've talked about it in relation to Johnny Miller, everybody who's playing good. You've just got to get your confidence up. When you do, it's a tremendous thing, a tremendous feeling.

"I knew if I didn't push too hard, didn't get impatient, the birdies would come. I just knew I was gonna make some birdies."

Tom Shaw came on with a 67 and was third at 137, seven under par for two trips over the 7,143-yard Deerwood Country Club course and four behind Thompson.

The group at 138 was made up of U.S. Amateur Champion Jerry Pate, Dave Stockton, Jerry McGee, Joe Inman, Peter Oosterhuis of England and Bobby Cole of South Africa. Oosterhuis matched Thompson's 66 as the best round of the tournament. Pate, McGee and Inman had 68s. Stockton and Cole 69s.

Mac McLendon, a co-leader in the first round, went to a 72 and 139. Lee Elder had a 73 and was well back at 141. U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin managed a 72 for 145.

Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino are not competing.

Pension Payments Persuader

HONOLULU (AP) — National Football League owners gave evidence here they will be just as tough as their employees when negotiations resume soon with the NFL Players Association.

Payments into the pension fund, normally made annually on Mar. 31, will not be made this year until agreement is reached in collective bargaining, a spokesman said.

That could take several months with negotiations not expected to start until mid-April at the earliest.

Managaement paid $4.43 million into the fund for the year ending Mar. 31, 1974, but the spokesman said no payment will be made this Mar. 31.

"As I see it, payments will be made where there is a new contract," Commissioner Pete Rozelle commented as the owners' annual meeting ended here Friday.

Payments for the past year are considered by management to be a matter for negotiations, but the owners fully expect the pension segment of the 1974-75 period to be covered when and if a new labor contract is signed.

KC Coach Believes Motta Technical Calls Deliberate

Dick Motta, the fiery coach of the Chicago Bulls, apparently will do almost anything to help his team win...even absorbing two technical fouls and being ejected from a game.

At least, that what Phil Johnson, coach of the Kansas CityOmaha Kings, thinks.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that Dick Motta deliberately drew the two technicals in the second quarter...to ignite his team," Johnson said Friday night after the first-place Bulls had beaten the Kings 104-98 and opened a 2½-game lead over Kansas City-Omaha in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association.

"I can't comment on the technical fouls, but I'm glad Phil Johnson felt I ignited my team," said Motta, who was ejected in the second period for disputing a foul call and appeared to shove referee Earl Strom. "He (Strom) charged me when I came off the bench and I may have hit him in the chest, but I didn't shove him."

Bob Love paced Chicago with 28 points and 13 rebounds, while the Kings' Nate Archibald led all scorers with 33 points.

In other NBA games, the Detroit Pistons beat the Houston Rockets 121-110, the Boston Celtics downed the Buffalo Braves 109-101, the Washington Bullets topped the New Orleans Jazz 122-109, the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Atlanta Hawks 114-103, the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Phoenix Suns 112-108, and the Los Angeles Lakers outlasted the Seattle SuperSonics 112-109 in overtime.

John Mengelt's scored 28 points, Curtis Rowe tossed in 22 and Bob Lanier added 21 points and 11 rebounds to lead Detroit.

Sidney Wicks hit for 23 points to lead Portland to victory.

Zelmo Beaty and Brian Winters each sank two free throws in the final 44 seconds of overtime, carrying the Lakers past Seattle.

Elvin Hayes pumped in 28 points and Mike Riordan chipped in 25 to pace Washington.

Fred Carter scored 30 points to push the 76ers past Atlanta.

Benko Foil Champ

NEW YORK (AP) — Gregory Benko of Australia, now attending Wayne State University in Detroit, won the foil title at the 15th International Fencing Tournament Friday night.

Benko beat Frederic Pietruszka of France and Edward Ballinger of the United States in a three-way fenceoff after they had tied with 3-2 records in the six-man final round-robin.

Pietruszka finished second with 1-1 and Ballinger was third.

In fourth place was Polish champion Zernek Wojiechowski, fifth was former world champion Christian Noel of France and sixth was Barry Paul of England. Each wound up with 2-3 records. Placings were decided by a count of touches.

Surprisingly eliminated in the first round, with no victories, was Gian Baptista Colletti of Italy.

The tournament attracted 96 fencers, largest in the event's history. The epee and women's foil will be contested Saturday. The tourney concludes Sunday with the saber.

Flames Shooting For Playoff Spot

ATLANTA (AP) — Keith McCreary, who scored a team record four goals, was talking playoffs after the Atlanta Flames had demolished the Vancouver Canucks 12-4 along with a handful of team records Friday night.

The Flames' National Hockey League victory gave them a 3029-13 record and 73 points, five fewer than the idle New York Islanders in the battle for a Division 1 playoff berth. Vancouver, 34-31-8, leads Division 2.

"If we can put it together now, we can still make the playoffs," said McCreary. "The morale is great, and I think we'll play progressively better every game."

Besides McCreary's onegame individual record, the Flames' 12 goals set a team mark; Tom Lysiak had a goal and three assists to top his year-old season point record, and the 16 goals for both teams was a new high for Atlanta's Omni.

That point total was only one above the 15 scored Wednesday night as the suddenly potent Flames beat Toronto, 8-7.

In Friday night's other NHL game, the California Seals tripped the St. Louis Blues 7-4.

There was nothing close about Friday's game as the Flames took a 4-0 first-period lead and held control all the way.

Vancouver Coach Phil Maloney pointed out the game was his team's fifth in seven days but offered no excuses. His analysis: "The goaltenders played poorly; the defense played poorly, and the forwards played poorly."

Gerry O'Flaherty scored three goals for Vancouver while the Flames took turns pelting Canucks goalies Gary Smith and Ken Lockett.

Lysiak's four points gave him 68 for the season on 21 goals and 47 assists. His old mark was 64.

Eric Vail and Hilliard Graves each had two goals for Atlanta, which had 46 shots on goal to 27 for the Canucks.

Rey Comeau, Curt Bennett and Buster Harvey added scores for the Flames, and Don Lever had one for Vancouver.

California's Joey Johnston scored once and assisted on two other goals to lead the Golden Seals past the Blues.

Angels Win Under Cubs' Rules

The Chicago Cubs refused to let the California Angels use a designated hitter in Friday's exhibition game. In effect, the Cubs designated that the California pitchers should bat for themselves.

Naturally, it backfired.

Charlie Hudson, the second California pitcher, forced to come to bat in the fourth inning, promptly lashed a two-out single off Ken Frailing and Joe Lahoud followed with a two-run homer that gave the Angels a 4-1 lead.

They went on to a 6-4 triumph but even the victory and the last laugh didn't do much for Manager Dick Williams' disposition.

"It's like saying if we don't play by their rules they'll take their ball and go home," he seethed. "We're not forcing them to use the rule, but I can't understand why we can't use a rule which applies to us during the season."

Elsewhere, the day was a disaster for the New York Mets' beleaguered pitching staff and a boon for some former Mets. While the red-hot Los Angeles Dodgers were cuffing three Met hurlers for 15 hits en route to a 13-5 rout, ex-Met Nolan Ryan and ex-Met farmhand Hudson yielded one run in six innings in California's victory over the Cubs, ex-Met Tommy Moore combined with Bob Forsch to pitch a one-hitter as the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Boston Red Sox 3-0 and ex-Met star Gary Gentry limited a split Houston squad to two hits in four innings as the Atlanta Brayes defeated the Astros 5-1.

In other games, the rest of the Astros blanked the Minnesota Twins 3-0, the Cincinnati Reds downed the Detroit Tigers 5-3, the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 in 10 innings, the Oakland A's beat the San Diego Padres 4-2, a split Kansas City squad thumped the New York Yankees 8-4 while the rest of the Royals blanked the Chicago White Sox 3-0, the Montreal Expos nipped the Texas Rangers 6-5 and the San Francisco Giants bopped the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Calling second-ranked UCLA "definitely more vulnerable than in the past," Arizona State Coach Ned Wulk hopes to lock the Bruins out of the NCAA championship round for the first time in nearly a decade with a victory in today's Far West Regional final at Portland, Ore.

The Bruins have had to fight for their lives in their first two games of the NCAA tourney. They were taken into overtime before emerging with a 103-91 triumph over Big Ten runnerup Michigan in the first round, and Thursday they struggled to a 67-64 decision over unranked and unheralded Montana of the Big Sky Conference in the Far West Regional semifinal.

Arizona State, meanwhile, qualified for today's Far West final by outrunning rugged Alabama 97-94 and scrappy Nevada-Las Vegas 87-84.

The UCLA-Arizona State winner, as well as the winners of today's three other regional finals, qualifies for the NCAA championship tournament in San Diego March 29 and 31.

"They don't have the dominating figures like they've had in recent years," said Wulk of UCLA, winner of nine of the past 11 NCAA titles and one of the final four teams in each of the past eight seasons.

"Dave Meyers is a bona fide All-American and Ralph Drollinger and Richard Washington have size and talent. But neither has the capability of dominating games like Bill Walton did," explained Wulk, referring to UCLA's star center who graduated last year.

And Meyers is far from full strength. The 6-foot-8 forward has been plagued by leg troubles for the past month, and could manage only 12 points and five rebounds against Montana.

Meanwhile, seventh-ranked Arizona State, like UCLA 25-3, was not exactly overwhelming against Nevada-Las Vegas. The Sun Devils trailed by eight points with 5:53 to go before pulling it out.

"Call me Mr. Lucky," said Wulk after the squeaker Thursday night. "We were most fortunate, and that is an understatment. Our press has to be more effective against UCLA if we're going to win."

The UCLA-Arizona State matchup is the final of today's four regionals.

Earlier, No. 20 Syracuse, 22-7 and upset winner over sixth-ranked North Carolina Thursday night, met No. 17 Kansas State, 20-8, in the Eastern Regional final at Providence, R.I.

In the Mideast Regional at Dayton, Ohio, top-ranked Indiana put its 34-game winning streak on the line against fifth-rated Kentucky, 24-4. The Wildcats were seeking to avenge a 98-74 loss to Indiana early in the regular season.

At Las Cruces, N.M., third-ranked Louisville, 26-2, took on the three-guard offense of Maryland, 24-4 and ranked No. 4, in the Midwest Regional.

Football Playoff Starts This Fall

High School Council Gives OK

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan high school football teams will decide state championships with a playoff this fall, according to Al Bush, director of athletics for the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

Bush said the prep football playoff was approved Friday night in Ann Arbor at a meeting of the MHSAA's Representative Council.

The members were in town for the state basketball championships at the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena Saturday.

The football playoff will follow the format set last fall when the MHSAA conducted a so-called "paper playoff."

Under the playoff format, the state will be divided into four regions in each of four class.

Throughout the regular season, teams will earn points based upon their success against their opponents. They also will earn bonus points based upon the cumulative success of all their opponents during the season.

At the end of the regular season, the team in each region with the most points will be declared the regional winner. Those four teams will then enter the playoffs for the state championship in their respective class.

State prep football squads still will be allowed to play up to nine games, Bush said.

Bush said Upper Peninsula teams, whose seasons generally end two to three weeks ahead of Lower Michigan schools, probably would have to wait and try to keep squads together if they qualifid for the playoffs and wanted to play.

Big Barney Holds Lead

Palmer Chasing Leader At Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Big Barney Thompson, who has yet to win in two years of tour activity, had no definite goal going into Saturday's third round of the $150,000 Greater Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament.

"I can't make any predictions. I'll just try to play another good round," said the red-haired, 6-foot-5 Thompson, whose six-under-par 66 gave him the 36-hole lead.

Arnold Palmer, who has won 61 times in 21 years of tour activity, had a very definite goal.

"I've had two rounds that were fair to good," said Palmer. "Now I've got to have two rounds that are really good."

Palmer, still one of the game's great attractions despite his long, frustrating slump, birdied four of five holes at one stretch on his way to a second consecutive 68 that left him three strokes back of Thompson.

"For a while," Palmer said, "I felt like I was going to birdie every hole. And that's the feeling you've got to have."

He said his confidence, at an ebb during his troubles of last season, was building to a peak.

"I've talked of confidence all year long," he said. "I've talked about it in relation to Johnny Miller, everybody who's playing good. You've just got to get your confidence up. When you do, it's a tremendous thing, a tremendous feeling.

"I knew if I didn't push too hard, didn't get impatient, the birdies would come. I just knew I was gonna make some birdies."

Tom Shaw came on with a 67 and was third at 137, seven under par for two trips over the 7,143-yard Deerwood Country Club course and four behind Thompson.

The group at 138 was made up of U.S. Amateur Champion Jerry Pate, Dave Stockton, Jerry McGee, Joe Inman, Peter Oosterhuis of England and Bobby Cole of South Africa. Oosterhuis matched Thompson's 66 as the best round of the tournament. Pate, McGee and Inman had 68s. Stockton and Cole 69s.

Mac McLendon, a co-leader in the first round, went to a 72 and 139. Lee Elder had a 73 and was well back at 141. U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin managed a 72 for 145.

Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino are not competing.

Pension Payments Persuader

HONOLULU (AP) — National Football League owners gave evidence here they will be just as tough as their employees when negotiations resume soon with the NFL Players Association.

Payments into the pension fund, normally made annually on Mar. 31, will not be made this year until agreement is reached in collective bargaining, a spokesman said.

That could take several months with negotiations not expected to start until mid-April at the earliest.

Managaement paid $4.43 million into the fund for the year ending Mar. 31, 1974, but the spokesman said no payment will be made this Mar. 31.

"As I see it, payments will be made where there is a new contract," Commissioner Pete Rozelle commented as the owners' annual meeting ended here Friday.

Payments for the past year are considered by management to be a matter for negotiations, but the owners fully expect the pension segment of the 1974-75 period to be covered when and if a new labor contract is signed.

'Wild Bunch' Exciting NIT Semifinalist

NEW YORK (AP) — When the Oregon Ducks beat you at basketball, they do it literally.

"If we ever have another war, I want them on my side," says Coach Lou Carnesecca of St. John's, whose team—along with Oregon, Providence and Princeton—plays in today's semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

Because of their all-out, courageous style, the Ducks are called "The Kamikaze Kids." Diving for loose balls, barreling into people and busting through press tables, they sometimes spend as much time in the prone position as they do standing up.

It has made the Ducks the most exciting and interesting team to watch in this 38th annual tournament.

"Our opponents say we're crazy," says Ronnie Lee, the Oregon guard who is the ringleader of the Wild Bunch. "The closest to us is the team I played against when I was with a U.S. All-Star team. That was in Russia."

This wildly singular approach is Coach Dick Harter's idea. In fact, when he conducts practices, there's always some time set aside for diving drills.

"We're just not great shooters," explains Lee. "So we have to do everything we can to win. We always play that way. If I'm playing against a little girl, I'll beat her up if I have too."

The gut reaction to this style of play from some opponents is that perhaps the Ducks should have their heads examined. But Stu Jackson doesn't see it that way.

"Some teams complain that we're too physical," says the 6-foot-5 forward. "They say we should be playing football. That's ridiculous. It's unintelligent."

Lee says that no one has been seriously hurt so far—a fact that upsets theories of logic.

"We've had a few bloody noses, but not much more than that," says Lee. "When you're loose like we are, I don't think you can hurt yourself badly."

Pete Carril, whose team faces the "Kamikaze Kids" today in the second semifinal game after the St. John's-Providence meeting, expresses fear and respect.

"They're killers," says Carril. "Sheer brutality. The offensive board work they do scares the hell out of me. They do a hell of a job defensively, too."

Harter doesn't like his team to be called "killers." He prefers the word, "character."

"There's nothing brutal about diving for a loose ball," he says.

KC Coach Believes Motta Technical Calls Deliberate

Dick Motta, the fiery coach of the Chicago Bulls, apparently will do almost anything to help his team win...even absorbing two technical fouls and being ejected from a game.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that Dick Motta deliberately drew the two technicals in the second quarter...to ignite his team," Johnson said Friday night after the first-place Bulls had beaten the Kings 104-98 and opened a 2½-game lead over Kansas City-Omaha in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association.

"I can't comment on the technical fouls, but I'm glad Phil Johnson felt I ignited my team," said Motta, who was ejected in the second period for disputing a foul call and appeared to shove referee Earl Strom. "He (Strom) charged me when I came off the bench and I may have hit him in the chest, but I didn't shove him."

Cass Sharpshooter On Class C Dream Team

Roger Walters Gains All-State Honors

An all-stater on the No. 1 team in the state.

Who could ask for more?

That's the distinct possibility for Cassopolis' Roger Walters, who today was named to the Class C All-State basketball squad by the Associated Press.

The Rangers' deadeye guard can make the day a double treat if Cassopolis can get past Bay City All Saints tonight in the Class C final at Ann Arbor.

Walters, one of the area's most prolific scorers ever, was the lone player in southwestern Michigan to land a berth on any of the four honor teams.

Walters is the hottest gun on a blazing offensive Cass gang. The 6-0 senior is averaging 26.2 points on a Ranger team averaging 80.6 points. Both Walters and Cass ended as the area's most potent point-makers.

In 27 games so far, Walters has hit a remarkable 55 per cent from the field and 73 per cent from the free throw lines. He also has contributed 169 rebounds and 58 assists.

Walters has been a model of consistency this season. He has reached double figures in every Ranger game and on 10 occasions he has scored 30 points or more. His 43 points in the Rangers' opening game against Mendon were a school record. Walters also holds the school mark for career points with 1264.

His 708 points this season are the most ever scored by a Blossomland player in a single season and put him in second place (behind Richie Jordan's 898) in the all-time area listings. Walters' current 26.2 average is the 10th best in all-time area history.

"He's the best shooter I've ever seen around here," voices Ranger coach Bob Follet of Walters, who also captured the Blossomland scoring title this season with a 25.0 average (fourth tops in Blossomland history). "And whenever we needed some big points he was our clutch man. It's nice in tight situations to have a shooter of his caliber.

"He and Dungey (Bill) really make our fast break go. He's also an excellent rebounder for a guard. He gets a lot of points inside because of his jumping ability."

Walters' shooting prowess hasn't come by accident.

"I practice almost every day and four hours every day during the summer months," notes Walters, called "Yak" by his teammates. "In the eighth grade I just dedicated by all my time to basketball. I just liked it better than other sports and thought I had a better future in basketball."

Walters, 17, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Walters of Vandalia, was elevated to the varsity as a sophomore in the seventh Ranger game of the 1972-73 season. Cass suffered through a 5-17 season (which included 16 straight defeats) in his first year but over the last two campaigns the Rangers have chalked up a 38-12 record.

Walters, hard to guard with his speed and many moves, thinks his running mate, playmaking guard Dungey, has played a key role in his success this season.

"He's (Dungey) the best playmaker guard in southwestern Michigan. He's meant a lot to me."

Follett thinks Walters can play big time basketball, but needs to sharpen his ball handling.

"I think he can play major college ball somewhere. He's a sound defensive player...when he has to he can play defense as well as anyone.

"His ball handling is lacking. But he can improve that...it's just a matter of applying himself. Remember this is his first year at guard. He played forward last year."

Walters has received letters from several interested colleges, including Michigan State, Western Michigan, Central Michigan, Washington State and Adrian.

"I'd like to got to college," notes Walters. "Shooting is the best part of my game so I know I'll have to work on my defense and ball handling.

"I'd like to go to the University of Colorado. They're a big school with a basketball program on the way up. And I'd like to help it."

Six All-State Stars In Title Tilts Today

What's harder for a high school basketball player than making the Associated Press All-State team?

Making the All-State team and playing in the state finals.

Despite long odds against that parlay, six All-Staters are on display today in the four state championship games at the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor.

Only unranked Mt. Pleasant in Class B and surprising Allendale in Class D have reached the state finals without the service of All-Staters, despite a series of major tournament upsets that have sidelined some of Michigan's most highly-sought basketball standouts.

The Class A championship game this afternoon matches Highland Park's super shooter Terry Duerod against Flint Northwestern's all-around standout James Person while tonight's Class C finals feature a duel between Roger Walters of Cassopolis and Bill Harris of Bay City All-Saints.

Clutch player Al Westendorp led Lakewood-Lake Odessa into the Class B finals this morning and 6-6 center Dave Simons is the kingpin of Mt. Pleasant Sacred Heart's Class D finalists.

But the six standouts still in action are just a sampling from a collection of 40 talented high school players that would make make any coach drool.

The Class A team is an awesome assembly of size and scoring power that includes the first sophomore ever selected by the Associated Press in Class A — Earvin Johnson of Lansing Everett.

Johnson, a slender 15-year-old standing 6-6, averaged 22.2 points and 16.8 rebounds, passed off for 129 assists in 23 games and won rave reviews from prep and college coaches while leading Everett to the state quarterfinals.

Most of the Class A stars boast fabulous statistics. Greg Lloyd of Lansing Eastern averaged 28.6 points, Bruce Flowers of Berkley 28 points and 21 rebounds, Duerod 27.9 points and Will Franklin of Birmingham Brother Rice — the only repeater in Class A — 19.9 points and 21.3 rebounds.

The squad also includes All-State quarterback Rick Leach of Flint Southwestern, who is headed for the University of Michigan on a football scholarship.

The Class B team is unusually small — four of the 10 players don't top six feet — but has a super big man in 6-6 Clarence Jackson of Albion, who averaged 29 points and 16.6 rebounds while shooting 56.7 from the floor.

Close on his heels in scoring is one of the little guys — Dave Johnson of Gaylord, who pumped in 28.8 points per game.

Repeaters from last year's AP team are Stan Joplin of Milan and Joe Slack of Jackson Lumen Christi.

Perennial power River Rouge is represented by forward Mel Woodyard and coach Lofton Green, voted Coach of the Year for the second straight season. His teams have won 566 games while losing only 127 and have a 153-19 record in tournament play.

Class C pointmakers are led by Walters and Greg Olney of Benzie Central, each of whom averaged 27.1 during the regular season.

Double trouble for opponents was provided by centers Bob Fowler of White Cloud and Jim Swaney of Traverse City St. Francis. Fowler averaged 26 points and 15 rebounds, Swaney 25.7 points and 16 rebounds.

Repeaters from the 1974 AP team include Henry DeLeeuw of Muskegon Christian and Bay City All Saints coach Russell "Lefty" Franz of Bay City All Saints, which also is represented by center Bill Harris.

The Class D honor squad includes twin towers Greg Guye and Mike Walton of Detroit East Catholic, rival Andre Brewster of Detroit DePorres and ace gunner Rick Furgerson of Dryden, who averaged 27 points and hit 110 of 126 free throws — 87 per cent.

Coach of the Year is Charlie Paige, whose Harbor Springs teams have posted a 68-8 record in the last three years.

Special Honors

Lynn Boitnott of Lawrence has been awarded Special Honors by the panel of voters selecting the 1975 Associated Press Class D All-State team.

Boitnott, a 6-5 senior center, averaged 20.3 points and 15 rebounds during the past season and 26 points and 20 rebounds in tournament play.

He is the only southwestern Michigan player to receive Special Honors this year.

Pony Baseball League Forming

Pony league baseball returns to the Twin City area this summer after an absence of more than a decade.

A 10-team league is now forming for 13-year-olds only. Lakeshore will field six teams, while two each will come from St. Joseph and North Lincoln.

The idea behind the league is to give players that might normally ride the bench in the Babe Ruth league a chance to play on a regular basis.

Those who are 13 before July 31 should contact either Ted Parker (983-1003) or Dave Karsten (983-1342).

Ham Shoot Sunday

EDWARDSBURG — The Edwardsburg Conservation Club will hold a ham shoot Sunday starting at 10 a.m. The club is located three miles north of Edwardsburg on Pine Lake St.

Allen Named AP Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Allen, whose fast-break tactics triggered Old Dominion to a national basketball championship, was named The Associated Press College Division Coach of the Year today.

Allen's Runnin' Monarchs won the NCAA's College Division II title and finished the 1974-75 season ranked No. 1 in The AP's College Division poll—both first-time accomplishments for the Virginia school which has been playing basketball since 1930.

Allen's team had a 25-6 record this season enroute to the 76-74 title-winner over the University of New Orleans at Evansville, Ind., but only one of the losses was to a College Division II team. The Monarchs lost a 71-69 decision at the buzzer on the road to Florida Southern and posted a 9-5 record over major schools.

Allen's victory in the Coach of the Year voting was as close as the winning game at Evansville. A nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters gave the Old Dominion coach a hair's-breadth margin over Lucius Mitchell of Kentucky State. The margin was roughly five to four.

Hull Breaks Season WHA Scoring Mark

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Bobby Hull and the Winnipeg Jets redeemed themselves Friday night and moved back into the thick of the battle for a wild-card berth in the World Hockey Association playoffs.

With Hull picking up a goal and two assists to become the highest single-season point-producer in WHA history, the Jets turned on the power in the third period to score a 6-3 victory over the New England Whalers in the only scheduled WHA game.

Hull now has registered 127 points on 69 goals and 58 assists to wipe out the old record of 124 points that San Diego's Andre Lacroix set two seasons ago.

"The record doesn't mean that much to me," said Hull. "The important thing is for us to make the playoffs. This was a big win for us. We played poorly the last time we were here but we redeemed ourselves tonight."

The victory gives the Jets a 33-31-4 record, good for 70 points and third place in the Canadian Division. The Whalers, who clinched the east division title earlier this week, are 38-26-5.

Taking a back seat to Hull was Winnipeg right wing Anders Hedberg, who scored three times, including a pair of goals in the third period.

Cass Sharpshooter On Class C Dream Team

Roger Walters Gains All-State Honors

An all-stater on the No. 1 team in the state.

Who could ask for more?

That's the distinct possibility for Cassopolis' Roger Walters, who today was named to the Class C All-State basketball squad by the Associated Press.

The Rangers' deadeye guard can make the day a double treat if Cassopolis can get past Bay City All Saints tonight in the Class C final at Ann Arbor.

Walters, one of the area's most prolific scorers ever, was the lone player in southwestern Michigan to land a berth on any of the four honor teams.

Walters is the hottest gun on a blazing offensive Cass gang. The 6-0 senior is averaging 26.2 points on a Ranger team averaging 80.6 points. Both Walters and Cass ended as the area's most potent point-makers.

In 27 games so far, Walters has hit a remarkable 55 per cent from the field and 73 per cent from the free throw lines. He also has contributed 169 rebounds and 58 assists.

Walters has been a model of consistency this season. He has reached double figures in every Ranger game and on 10 occasions he has scored 30 points or more. His 43 points in the Rangers' opening game against Mendon were a school record. Walters also holds the school mark for career points with 1264.

His 708 points this season are the most ever scored by a Blossomland player in a single season and put him in second place (behind Richie Jordan's 888) in the all-time area listings. Walters' current 26.2 average is the 10th best in all-time area history.

"He's the best shooter I've ever seen around here," voices Ranger coach Bob Follet of Walters, who also captured the Blossomland scoring title this season with a 25.0 average (fourth tops in Blossomland history). "And whenever we needed some big points he was our clutch man. It's nice in tight situations to have a shooter of his caliber.

"He and Dungey (Bill) really make our fast break go. He's also an excellent rebounder for a guard. He gets a lot of points inside because of his jumping ability."

Walters' shooting prowess hasn't come by accident.

"I practice almost every day and four hours every day during the summer months," notes Walters, called "Yak" by his teammates. "In the eighth grade I just dedicated by all my time to basketball. I just liked it better than other sports and thought I had a better future in basketball."

Walters, 17, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Walters of Vandalia, was elevated to the varsity as a sophomore in the seventh Ranger game of the 1972-73 season. Cass suffered through a 5-17 season (which included 16 straight defeats) in his first year but over the last two campaigns the Rangers have chalked up a 38-12 record.

Walters, hard to guard with his speed and many moves, thinks his running mate, playmaking guard Dungey, has played a key role in his success this season.

"He's (Dungey) the best playmaker guard in southwestern Michigan. He's meant a lot to me."

Follett thinks Walters can play big time basketball, but needs to sharpen his ball handling.

"I think he can play major college ball somewhere. He's a sound defensive player...when he has to he can play defense as well as anyone.

"His ball handling is lacking. But he can improve that...it's just a matter of applying himself. Remember this is his first year at guard. He played forward last year."

Walters has received letters from several interested colleges, including Michigan State, Western Michigan, Central Michigan, Washington State and Adrian.

"I'd like to got to college," notes Walters. "Shooting is the best part of my game so I know I'll have to work on my defense and ball handling.

"I'd like to go to the University of Colorado. They're a big school with a basketball program on the way up. And I'd like to help it."

Tigers Can't Find Starters

Reds Don't Help Lemanczyk's Chances

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Not that he wants it that way, but Manager Ralph Houk of the Detroit Tigers probably won't be able to pick his third and fourth starting pitchers until the waning moments of spring training.

Nobody seems to be making a string bid for the open spots behind Joe Coleman and Mickey Lolich, and Cincinnati didn't do much for Dave Lemanczyk's chances on Friday.

Lemancyzk was a little wild but okay for five innings against the Reds, and then the roof caved in. The Reds scored four times in the sixth and took a 5-3 exhibition baseball victory.

The loss snapped Detroit's three-game win streak and left the door wide open for any five other Detroit hopefuls to make their bid for a starter's job.

Besides Lemaneczyk, still in the running for the starting rotation are Luke Walker, Vern Ruhle, Tom Walker, Fred Holdsworth and Leron Lagrow.

Cincinnati is now 9-5 in Grapefruit League play while the Tigers dropped to 6-10.

Dave Concepcion collected three singles, drove in a run and stole a base to pace the Reds. Joe Morgan and Dave Revering hit a double and triple to start the big sixth inning.

Tom Carroll pitched six innings for Cincinnati, three-up, three-down in four of them, and giving up one run and two hits in both of the others.

Tom Walker pitched one-hit, four-inning relief for Detroit. Houk has intended that Walker be righthanded relief help for overworked John Hiller, but circumstances may push Walker into a starting job.

"Now we're just getting to the point where we can start evaluating the pitchers," Houk said.

Lemaneczyk's proolem has been lack of control.

"His direction has been a little off, but that's the only thing he's been off on," said pitching coach Steve Hamilton. "He hasn't really been hit hard, he's shown us a good arm and that he can get hitters out.

"Up to this point we have stressed getting into shape and putting stuff on the ball with him. Now we can work on pitching philosophy and control."

Morgan opened the sixth with his double and scored on Revering's triple. Then Roger Freed walked and Concepcion singled home Revering. Other runs followed a throwing error by Walker and a bases loaded walk to Pete Rose.

Detroit scored in the third on a triple by 20-year-old rookie outfielder John Valle and a single by Terry Humphrey.

Back-to-back doubles by John Knox and Willie Horton gave Detroit a run in the sixth and the Tigrs scored again in the eighth on a fielder's choice grounder by Reggie Sanders.

The Tigers were to host Pittsburgh today with Lolich scheduled to start. Cincinnati was to host the Kansas City Royals at Tampa.

Pistons Get Second Wind, Edge Rockets

DETROIT (AI) — Detroit Pistons coach Ray Scott says his team was "defensively tired."

But the Pistons found their second wind with two minutes remaining to hold off a fired-up Houston Rockets quintet for a 121-110 National Basketball Association victory Friday night.

John Mengelt scored 28 points to pace Detroit to its first victory in four starts and put the Pistons one game ahead of Milwaukee in their battle for the NBA Western Conference wild-card playoff berth.

The defeat left Houston, led by Calvin Murphy's 31 points, only one-half game ahead of Cleveland in their duel for second place in the Central Division.

The Pistons built up a 31-point margin in the first half and led by 16 going into the final quarter. But the Rockets came roaring back to close the gap to 108-104 with 2:19 minutes to play.

Then the Pistons got going again. A bucket by Curtis Rowe, a free throw by Howard Porter and two more charity tosses by Mengelt, gave Detroit a nine-point bulge with 1:21 left, and eight fast-break points in the last 37 seconds sealed the victory.

"We got a little tired defensively," said Scott in explaining the Piston's near-collapse in the final quarter, "and we didn't handle the ball well in pressure situations. Those are things we have to correct."

Detroit center Bob Lanier, whose status was doubtful before the game because of a knee injury, made his presence felt early and led Detroit to a 60 per cent shooting average and a 25-point halftime lead.

Calvin Murphy hit 10 points and Rudy Tomjanovich and Kevin Kunnert each added eight points as the Rockets fought back to trail 86-70 after three periods.

Rowe had 22 points and Lanier finished with 21 points and 11 rebounds as the Pistons rolled up 39 first-quarter points, a season's high. Tomjanovich added 20 points for the Rockets.

Houston coach John Egan, who kept Tomjanovich on the bench in the closing minutes because of a groin injury, said his star didn't play up to par despite his 20 points.

"He pulled a groin muscle and hasn't practiced much in the past several days," Egan said. "He was sluggish tonight and I didn't want to use him because we've got seven games to go and I need him in the stretch."

The Pistons also have seven games remaining and are two games up in the win column on Milwaukee in their playoff fight.

Erving, Kenon About Lock Up Eastern Title For Nets

From Associated Press

The New York Nets, led by forwards Julius Erving and Larry Kenon, ran away from the Kentucky Colonels Friday night, and as a result have just about locked up first place in the Eastern Division of the American Basketball Association.

"Once we got running, they couldn't stay with us," said Erving, who scored 28 of his game-high 37 points in the second half, when the Nets erased a nine-point deficit and pulled away. Erving grabbed 12 rebounds, while Kenon added 30 points and 19 rebounds.

The victory, New York's fourth in a row and seventh in eight games, gave the Nets a commanding five-game lead over the second-place Colonels in the ABA East with nine games remaining in the regular season. Any combination of four New York victories and Kentucky losses will guarantee first place for the Nets.

Elsewhere in the ABA, the San Antonio Spurs whipped the Virginia Squires 136-115, the Indiana Pacers beat the San Diego Conquistadors 115-103 and the Memphis Sounds defeated the Utah Stars 98-93.

Kentucky led by nine points early in the third quarter before Erving took over. He scored 16 points in the third period to cut the deficit to 77-76, then sank the first six points of the fourth period to put the Nets ahead for good.

It was Kentucky's third straight loss and seventh in 11 games.

"At the beginning of the second half we decided to push the ball up the court as quickly as possible and force Kentucky into a running game," said Erving. "We wanted to go for the opportunity shot rather than set it up. We're better at a running game."

A big factor for New York was rookie guard Al Skinner, who had 19 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists.

Dan Issel topped Kentucky with 25 points and Artis Gilmore and Louie Dampier had 18 each.

James Silas led the San Antonio onslaught with 32 points as the Spurs posted their fourth victory in a row.

Stew Johnson topped Memphis with 28 points.

Flags Down Gears, Wings IHL Losers

From Associated Press

Larry Jacques slapped in a goal at 4:51 of overtime to give the Port Huron Flags a 6-5 victory over the Saginaw Gears in International Hockey League action Friday night.

In other IHL games Friday, Flint defeated Kalamazoo, 5-2; Dayton topped Toledo, 5-2, and Des Moines outlasted Columbus, 9-7.

Len Fontaine scored two goals for the Flags, while Brian Glenwright slapped in three goals in a losing effort for the Gears.

The Flags jumped off to a 3-0 lead after first period, and led 5-2 after the middle stanza before Saginaw scored three goals in the third period to send the game into overtime.

The Flags are fourth in the IHL's North Division, while Saginaw is in a second-place tie with Flint.

Doug Manchak scored his 60th goal of the season in leading Flint to its victory. Manchak is only the 10th player in IHL history to attain a 60-goal season.

Tony White scored the winning goal early in the second period for Dayton, which already has clinched the South Division title. Toledo, which is assured of third place in the South, played before a home crowd of 4,572 to raise the Goaldiggers' season total to 153,082, a 25-year hockey attendance high.

Des Moines defenseman Dave Inkpen netted three goals to lead the Capitols to their victory. It was the first time a Des Moines defenseman scored a hat trick.

Pat Russell added two goals for Des Moines, while Mike Powers paced the Columbus attack with a pair of goals. Both teams begin playoff action next week. Des Moines will be at Dayton for a pair of games and Columbus hosts Toledo.

Tigers' Rodriguez Back To Using Full-Cut Swing

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Aurelio Rodriguez is tired of trying to hit the ball to right field.

The Detroit Tiger third-baseman has tried for the past two years to become a punch hitter, but it just hasn't worked. So this baseball season, the career .237 hitter is back to a full-cut swing.

It might not help, but he only hit .222 the past two years, so it probably can't hurt—although he has been having a poor spring training season at the plate.

Last year Rodriguez was the top Tiger hitter in Florida with a .373 average.

"I just try to hit the ball hard now," the slick-fielding Mexican said prior to a recent exhibition game. "I'm not trying to go to right field anymore. If I tried to swing like I used to, I hope I do better.

"When I played in Washington, I didn't try to go to right field. (Manager) Ted Williams told me, 'You don't have to, just hit the ball hard.'

"Last year, I cut down on my strikeouts but I hit .222."

Rodriguez is a righthanded hitter. He said Manager Ralph Houk and Al Kaline told him this spring to discontinue trying to poke the ball to the opposite field.

Kaline, in his first year of retirement after starring for 22 years with Detroit, has been a special hitting instructor in camp.

Rodriguez, 27, was obtained from Washington in 1970 in the eight-man deal involving Denny McLain. He missed only three games last year and hasn't played in fewer than 153 since his first full season in the majors in 1969 with California.

The next year, spent almost entirely with the Senators, Rodriguez belted 19 home runs, drove in 83 and hit .249.

Last year he managed only five homers and 49 RBIs.

"Ralph said I should swing whatever way feels better," Rodriguez said, sounding a bit discouraged.

When asked what his hitting goals are, he said, "I'm not going to say anything this year. I'm just going to go out and do my best."

Tigers Can't Find Starters

Reds Don't Help Lemanczyk's Chances

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Not that he wants it that way, but Manager Ralph Houk of the Detroit Tigers probably won't be able to pick his third and fourth starting pitchers until the waning moments of spring training.

Nobody seems to be making a string bid for the open spots behind Joe Coleman and Mickey Lolich, and Cincinnati didn't do much for Dave Lemanczyk's chances on Friday.

Lemancyzk was a little wild but okay for five innings against the Reds, and then the roof caved in. The Reds scored four times in the sixth and took a 5-3 exhibition baseball victory.

The loss snapped Detroit's three-game win streak and left the door wide open for any five other Detroit hopefuls to make their bid for a starter's job.

Besides Lemanczyk, still in the running for the starting rotation are Luke Walker, Vern Ruhle, Tom Walker, Fred Holdsworth and Leron Lagrow.

Cincinnati is now 9-5 in Grapefruit League play while the Tigers dropped to 6-10.

Dave Concepcion collected three singles, drove in a run and stole a base to pace the Reds. Joe Morgan and Dave Revering hit a double and triple to start the big sixth inning.

Tom Carroll pitched six innings for Cincinnati, three-up, three-down in four of them, and giving up one run and two hits in both of the others.

Tom Walker pitched one-hit, four-inning relief for Detroit. Houk has intended that Walker be righthanded relief help for overworked John Hiller, but circumstances may push Walker into a starting job.

"Now we're just getting to the point where we can start evaluating the pitchers," Houk said.

Lemanczyk's proolem has been lack of control.

"His direction has been a little off, but that's the only thing he's been off on," said pitching coach Steve Hamilton. "He hasn't really been hit hard, he's shown us a good arm and that he can get hitters out.

"Up to this point we have stressed getting into shape and putting stuff on the ball with him. Now we can work on pitching philosophy and control."

Morgan opened the sixth with his double and scored on Revering's triple. Then Roger Freed walked and Concepcion singled home Revering. Other runs followed a throwing error by Walker and a bases loaded walk to Pete Rose.

Detroit scored in the third on a triple by 20-year-old rookie outfielder John Valle and a single by Terry Humphrey.

Back-to-back doubles by John Knox and Willie Horton gave Detroit a run in the sixth and the Tigrs scored again in the eighth on a fielder's choice grounder by Reggie Sanders.

The Tigers were to host Pittsburgh today with Lolich scheduled to start. Cincinnati was to host the Kansas City Royals at Tampa.

Pistons Get Second Wind, Edge Rockets

DETROIT (AI) — Detroit Pistons coach Ray Scott says his team was "defensively tired."

But the Pistons found their second wind with two minutes remaining to hold off a fired-up Houston Rockets quintet for a 121-110 National Basketball Association victory Friday night.

John Mengelt scored 28 points to pace Detroit to its first victory in four starts and put the Pistons one game ahead of Milwaukee in their battle for the NBA Western Conference wildcard playoff berth.

The defeat left Houston, led by Calvin Murphy's 31 points, only one-half game ahead of Cleveland in their duel for second place in the Central Division.

The Pistons built up a 31-point margin in the first half and led by 16 going into the final quarter. But the Rockets came roaring back to close the gap to 108-104 with 2:19 minutes to play.

Then the Pistons got going again. A bucket by Curtis Rowe, a free throw by Howard Porter and two more charity tosses by Mengelt, gave Detroit a nine-point bulge with 1:21 left, and eight fast-break points in the last 37 seconds sealed the victory.

"We got a little tired defensively," said Scott in explaining the Piston's near-collapse in the final quarter, "and we didn't handle the ball well in pressure situations. Those are things we have to correct."

Detroit center Bob Lanier, whose status was doubtful before the game because of a knee injury, made his presence felt early and led Detroit to a 60 per cent shooting average and a 25-point halftime lead.

Calvin Murphy hit 10 points and Rudy Tomjanovich and Kevin Kunnert each added eight points as the Rockets fought back to trail 86-70 after three periods.

Rowe had 22 points and Lanier finished with 21 points and 11 rebounds as the Pistons rolled up 39 first-quarter points, a season's high. Tomjanovich added 20 points for the Rockets.

Houston coach John Egan, who kept Tomjanovich on the bench in the closing minutes because of a groin injury, said his star didn't play up to par despite his 20 points.

"He pulled a groin muscle and hasn't practiced much in the past several days," Egan said. "He was sluggish tonight and I didn't want to use him because we've got seven games to go and I need him in the stretch."

The Pistons also have seven games remaining and are two games up in the win column on Milwaukee in their playoff fight.

Erving, Kenon About Lock Up Eastern Title For Nets

From Associated Press

The New York Nets, led by forwards Julius Erving and Larry Kenon, ran away from the Kentucky Colonels Friday night, and as a result have just about locked up first place in the Eastern Division of the American Basketball Association.

"Once we got running, they couldn't stay with us," said Erving, who scored 28 of his game-high 37 points in the second half, when the Nets erased a nine-point deficit and pulled away. Erving grabbed 12 rebounds, while Kenon added 30 points and 19 rebounds.

The victory, New York's fourth in a row and seventh in eight games, gave the Nets a commanding five-game lead over the second-place Colonels in the ABA East with nine games remaining in the regular season. Any combination of four New York victories and Kentucky losses will guarantee first place for the Nets.

Elsewhere in the ABA, the San Antonio Spurs whipped the Virginia Squires 136-115, the Indiana Pacers beat the San Diego Conquistadors 115-103 and the Memphis Sounds defeated the Utah Stars 98-93.

Kentucky led by nine points early in the third quarter before Erving took over. He scored 16 points in the third period to cut the deficit to 77-76, then sank the first six points of the fourth period to put the Nets ahead for good.

It was Kentucky's third straight loss and seventh in 11 games.

"At the beginning of the second half we decided to push the ball up the court as quickly as possible and force Kentucky into a running game," said Erving. "We wanted to go for the opportunity shot rather than set it up. We're better at a running game."

A big factor for New York was rookie guard Al Skinner, who had 19 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists.

Dan Issel topped Kentucky with 25 points and Artis Gilmore and Louie Dampier had 18 each.

James Silas led the San Antonio onslaught with 32 points as the Spurs posted their fourth victory in a row.

Stew Johnson topped Memphis with 28 points.

Flags Down Gears, Wings IHL Losers

From Associated Press

Larry Jacques slapped in a goal at 4:51 of overtime to give the Port Huron Flags a 6-5 victory over the Saginaw Gears in International Hockey League action Friday night.

In other IHL games Friday, Flint defeated Kalamazoo, 5-2; Dayton topped Toledo, 5-2, and Des Moines outlasted Columbus, 9-7.

Len Fontaine scored two goals for the Flags, while Brian Glenwright slapped in three goals in a losing effort for the Gears.

The Flags jumped off to a 3-0 lead after first period, and led 5-2 after the middle stanza before Saginaw scored three goals in the third period to send the game into overtime.

The Flags are fourth in the IHL's North Division, while Saginaw is in a second-place tie with Flint.

Doug Manchak scored his 60th goal of the season in leading Flint to its victory. Manchak is only the 10th player in IHL history to attain a 60-goal season.

Tony White scored the winning goal early in the second period for Dayton, which already has clinched the South Division title. Toledo, which is assured of third place in the South, played before a home crowd of 4,572 to raise the Goaldiggers' season total to 153,682, a 25-year hockey attendance high.

Des Moines defenseman Dave Inkpen netted three goals to lead the Capitols to their victory. It was the first time a Des Moines defenseman scored a hat trick.

Pat Russell added two goals for Des Moines, while Mike Powers paced the Columbus attack with a pair of goals. Both teams begin playoff action next week. Des Moines will be at Dayton for a pair of games and Columbus hosts Toledo.

Tigers' Rodriguez Back To Using Full-Cut Swing

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Aurelio Rodriguez is tired of trying to hit the ball to right field.

The Detroit Tiger third-baseman has tried for the past two years to become a punch hitter, but it just hasn't worked. So this baseball season, the career .237 hitter is back to a full-cut swing.

It might not help, but he only hit .222 the past two years, so it probably can't hurt—although he has been having a poor spring training season at the plate.

Last year Rodriguez was the top Tiger hitter in Florida with a .373 average.

"I just try to hit the ball hard now," the slick-fielding Mexican said prior to a recent exhibition game. "I'm not trying to go to right field anymore. If I tried to swing like I used to, I hope I do better.

"When I played in Washington, I didn't try to go to right field. (Manager) Ted Williams told me, 'You don't have to, just hit the ball hard.'

"Last year, I cut down on my strikeouts but I hit .222."

Rodriguez is a righthanded hitter. He said Manager Ralph Houk and Al Kaline told him this spring to discontinue trying to poke the ball to the opposite field.

Kaline, in his first year of retirement after starring for 22 years with Detroit, has been a special hitting instructor in camp.

Rodriguez, 27, was obtained from Washington in 1970 in the eight-man deal involving Denny McLain. He missed only three games last year and hasn't played in fewer than 153 since his first full season in the majors in 1969 with California.

The next year, spent almost entirely with the Senators, Rodriguez belted 19 home runs, drove in 83 and hit .249.

Last year he managed only five homers and 49 RBIs.

"Ralph said I should swing whatever way feels better," Rodriguez said, sounding a bit discouraged.

When asked what his hitting goals are, he said, "I'm not going to say anything this year. I'm just going to go out and do my best."

Oldsters Bitter About Refunds

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Several hundred elderly residents on New York's Long Island are bitter about a quirk in the state law that has prevented them from getting refunds for errors made in their property tax bills.

These home owners discovered that they were being overtaxed because somebody in the assessor's office had forgotten to give them the senior citizen tax exemptions to which they were entitled by law.

Local authorities sympathized, but pointed out that a new state law probibited any refunds except for "computational computertype" mistakes in tax bills.

Some state legislators have pledged themselves to amend the legislation.

AROUND HOMES, PROPERTY

Spring Improvements Due

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

There is a lot a do-it-yourselfer can do to improve the land around property, and a good head start for a spring upheaval could be made now. Consider these ideas:

1. Ridding the landscape of eyesores: screening backyard incinerator, clothes dryer and so on. Sapling fences might be a good bet in some areas and they offer instant screen.

2. Choosing a ground cover for bare spots: Ajuga, myrtle, pachysandra, English Ivy are good choices, depending on the soil.

3. On the north side of the house, fast-growing trees could serve as windbreak against north winds that keep the furnace jobbing.

4. Make plans to plant trees where misplaced screened porches or decks get the full brunt of the afternoon sun.

5. Rock gardens can emerge from unsightly mounds. Plan to dig them out to see if you can expose enough rocks to make a little garden. Make a notation of plants that would grow in that area. If you get an early start you could grow the seed in flats, bringing down the cost of the plants.

If you have a good level stretch of land at the back of your house, you should not make the mistake of disturbing it with an assortment of bushes or trees except at the perimeter. Put all your efforts into a lush lawn with a spectacular tree, perhaps a Japanese cherry, at the end, and with a border of bushes, flowers and ground covers at the sides.

A flat lawn can be a real joy. Nutured, it can be kept in shape for croquet, paddle tennis and entertaining.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — As a veteran, I know I can get a home mortgage guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. However, my wife and I have decided to purchase a condominium. Are there any VA mortgages for condominiums?

A. — Until recently, the answer would have been no. But, under the recently signed Veterans Housing Act, loan guarantees up to $17,500 can be obtained by veterans for the purchase of condominiums.

Q. — My husband and I recently bought an older home that is going to require some modernization. We plan to start with the kitchen. He is an avid do-it-yourselfer, he intends to install the cabinets himself, but has left the selection of them up to me. Our building supply dealer has a good selection of cabinets and I have found one that appeals to me. But the brand name is unfamiliar to me. Is there any way I can tell if the cabinets will give good service?

A. — Look for an NKCA certification seal. The seal indicates that the cabinets have been tested by the National Kitchen Cabinet Assn. for compliance with the standards of the American National Standards Institute. Certified cabinets are subjected to a series of tests to assure that they will withstand years of normal punishment in the kitchen. This does not mean that cabinets without the seal might not be of high quality. In that event, get an opinion from someone (perhaps your husband) who knows something about good workmanship.

Q. I am building a utility room off our kitchen to house our washer, dryer, food freezer, etc. Can I use vinyl asbestos tile on the floor?

A. — Yes. It wears well and cleans easily.

Q. — How can the old paint be removed from the outside of a brick house? Someone painted the brickwork years ago long before we owned the house. A neighbor's house, exactly the same as the one we have, looks much prettier than ours. It still has the orginal brick, unpainted and without a covering of any kind.

A. — Removing the paint from an all-brick house is too difficult a job for the average person. It should be done professionally, preferably by sandblasting.

LET LANDSCAPING PAY

It has been said that a tree on a city lot is worth $1,500. That depends on where the lot is in what city, but it does point out the value of landscaping to your property. Any Realtor will confirm that a well-landscaped home or apartment building sells quicker and at a better price than one that is not.

The obvious reason is that we are becoming more appreciative of the beauty of foliage and its affect on our lives and are willing to pay for it. We are also becoming more aware of its practicality.

The right shrubs and trees can screen a busy street and soften its impact without blocking it out completely. Plantings can provide privacy between neighbors without shutting out friendliness. A tree dappling your house with shade on a hot summer day can lower the temperature 10 degrees.

Landscaping can provide you with a menagerie of squirrels and birds and patterns of light, shade and color.

Emergence of landscape architecture as a more widespread vocation has made us generally dissatisfied with simple rectangles of green lawn and a few plantings around the foundation. Hardly a factory or building of consequence is completed now without professional landscaping adding a touch of nature's beauty. When new civic buildings are constructed, the impact of the landscaping often is as satisfying to the citizenry as a genius of the building itself.

We are exposed constantly to masterful jobs of landscaping along freeways, in parks, in malls, and welthier neighborhoods.

This has had the effect of creating a demand for an imaginative variety of plants, flowers, shrubs and trees at nurseries, making it profitable for them to carry such a stock at reasonable prices.

This awareness of the contribution natural greenery can make to living is spreading in other ways as well. Experiments with pocket parks in the midst of our cities, small retreats of foliage, fountains, birds, flowers, and peacefulness, have been so successful that we can expect wider use of them. They are one answer to the charge that our cities are becoming bleak seas of asphalt and concrete.

It's as if urban mankind is trying to get back some of the basic satisfaction there always has been in getting dirt under his fingernails as he cultivates the soil, the enjoyment of a walk through woods and meadows.

The right plants can actually reduce your maintenance chores.

As a Realtor, I would advise property owners to provide good landscaping around your home or other building. Aside from the satisfaction it contributes to living, it will contribute dollars to your pocket when and if you sell.

If you are interested in selling your property, call Berrien Real Estate Service, 983-1188.

'75 Called Bargain Year For Hardwood Consumers

"This year is going to be a big bargain year for purchasing genuine hardwood products", according to Robert E. Hollowell, Jr., president of the National Hardwood Lumber association.

"Prices for many items will be at their lowest (and most attractive for consumers) level in years, though it is doubtful that they will stay that way for long.

"Higher prices are expected again as the market strengthens."

The U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics figures show that the wholesale price index for lumber and wood products was down for the eighth consecutive month as of the end of the year, ending up 11.1 percent lower than it was a year ago.

"The hardwood industry is a traditionally cyclical one," Holowell said, "with shifts in pricing which reflect its close dependence upon the prevailing supply and demand situation."

At the end of 1974 there was a sharp decrease in the demand for furniture and furniture materials, following in the wake of what has been called "the worst slump in the home building industry in 20 years." The result has been a swelling of inventories and a corresponding slump in prices for items that have backed up in warehouses.

"This," Hollowell said, "would therefore be an ideal time for bargain hunters to finalize plans for refurnishing the home, or for purchasing on a higher quality scale. In an effort to move inventories, many furniture retailers and manufacturers are lowering prices; and items of genuine hardwood are now available at prices you'd expect to be paying for imitations."

The major market for hardwood is the furniture industry. Hardwood such as oak, maple, mahogany, cherry, walnut and pecan are traditional and immediately come to mind when thinking of quality furniture. But other, perhaps lesser-known species such as gum, hickory, beech, birch, tupelo and elm also go into furniture, often as interior woods.

Flooring is hardwood's second largest market, and it too follows the housing industry.

Therefore, Hollowell suggests this would also be an ideal time for homeowners to install hardwood flooring, a decision that may have been postponed to an indefinite future. Typical flooring species such as oak, maple, beech and birch are readily available right now, at a bargain price. And the workmen needed to do the job are largely at liberty from the home building industry, and eager for the work.

Oldsters Bitter About Refunds

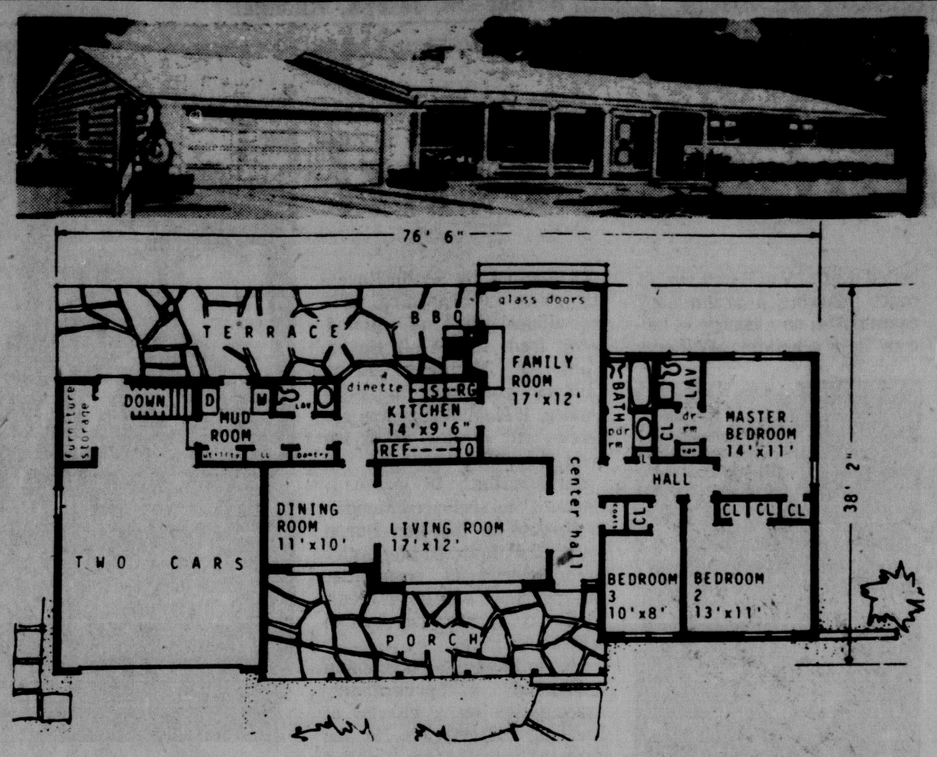
By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Several hundred elderly residents on New York's Long Island are bitter about a quirk in the state law that has prevented them from getting refunds for errors made in their property tax bills.

These home owners discovered that they were being overtaxed because somebody in the assessor's office had forgotten to give them the senior citizen tax exemptions to which they were entitled by law.

Local authorities sympathized, but pointed out that a new state law probibited any refunds except for "computational computertype" mistakes in tax bills.

Some state legislators have pledged themselves to amend the legislation.



THIS LONG AND LUXURIOUS plan features all living areas off a central hall that minimizes through traffic. Seven rooms and two and a half baths are included in the 1,350 square feet living area. A utility area is added behind the garage and a built-in terrace barbecue is a great warm-weather bonus. Plan HA875C was designed by Lester Cohen, Room 505, 48 West 48th street, New York, N.Y. 10036. Anyone wishing to know the cost of the blueprint can write to the architect enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AROUND HOMES, PROPERTY

Spring Improvements Due

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

There is a lot a do-it-yourselfer can do to improve the land around property, and a good head start for a spring upheaval could be made now. Consider these ideas:

1. Ridding the landscape of eyesores: screening backyard incinerator, clothes dryer and so on. Sapling fences might be a good bet in some areas and they offer instant screen.

2. Choosing a ground cover for bare spots: Ajuga, myrtle, pachysandra, English Ivy are good choices, depending on the soil.

3. On the north side of the house, fast-growing trees could serve as windbreak against north winds that keep the furnace jobbing.

4. Make plans to plant trees where misplaced screened porches or decks get the full brunt of the afternoon sun.

5. Rock gardens can emerge from unsightly mounds. Plan to dig them out to see if you can expose enough rocks to make a little garden. Make a notation of plants that would grow in that area. If you get an early start you could grow the seed in flats, bringing down the cost of the plants.

If you have a good level stretch of land at the back of your house, you should not make the mistake of disturbing it with an assortment of bushes or trees except at the perimeter. Put all your efforts into a lush lawn with a spectacular tree, perhaps a Japanese cherry, at the end, and with a border of bushes, flowers and ground covers at the sides.

A flat lawn can be a real joy. Nutured, it can be kept in shape for croquet, paddle tennis and entertaining.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — As a veteran, I know I can get a home mortgage guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. However, my wife and I have decided to purchase a condominium. Are there any VA mortgages for condominiums?

A. — Until recently, the answer would have been no. But, under the recently signed Veterans Housing Act, loan guarantees up to $17,500 can be obtained by veterans for the purchase of condominiums.

Q. — My husband and I recently bought an older home that is going to require some modernization. We plan to start with the kitchen. He is an avid do-it-yourselfer, he intends to install the cabinets himself, but has left the selection of them up to me. Our building supply dealer has a good selection of cabinets and I have found one that appeals to me. But the brand name is unfamiliar to me. Is there any way I can tell if the cabinets will give good service?

A. — Look for an NKCA certification seal. The seal indicates that the cabinets have been tested by the National Kitchen Cabinet Assn. for compliance with the standards of the American National Standards Institute. Certified cabinets are subjected to a series of tests to assure that they will withstand years of normal punishment in the kitchen. This does not mean that cabinets without the seal might not be of high quality. In that event, get an opinion from someone (perhaps your husband) who knows something about good workmanship.

Q. I am building a utility room off our kitchen to house our washer, dryer, food freezer, etc. Can I use vinyl asbestos tile on the floor?

A. — Yes. It wears well and cleans easily.

Q. — How can the old paint be removed from the outside of a brick house? Someone painted the brickwork years ago long before we owned the house. A neighbor's house, exactly the same as the one we have, looks much prettier than ours. It still has the orginal brick, unpainted and without a covering of any kind.

A. — Removing the paint from an all-brick house is too difficult a job for the average person. It should be done professionally, preferably by sandblasting.

LET LANDSCAPING PAY

It has been said that a tree on a city lot is worth $1,500. That depends on where the lot is in what city, but it does point out the value of landscaping to your property. Any Realtor will confirm that a well-landscaped home or apartment building sells quicker and at a better price than one that is not.

The obvious reason is that we are becoming more appreciative of the beauty of foliage and its affect on our lives and are willing to pay for it. We are also becoming more aware of its practicality.

The right shrubs and trees can screen a busy street and soften its impact without blocking it our completely. Plantings can provide privacy between neighbors without shutting out friendliness. A tree dappling your house with shade on a hot summer day can lower the temperature 10 degrees.

Landscaping can provide you with a menagerie of squirrels and birds and patterns of light, shade and color.

Emergence of landscape architecture as a more widespread vocation has made us generaly dissatisfied with simple rectangles of green lawn and a few plantings around the foundation. Hardly a factory or building of consequence is completed now without professional landscaping adding a touch of nature's beauty. When new civic buildings are constructed, the impact of the landscaping often is as satisfying to the citizenry as a grace of the building itself.

We are exposed constantly to masterful jobs of landscaping along freeways, in parks, in malls, and welthier neighborhoods.

This has had the effect of creating a demand for an imaginative variety of plants, flowers, shrubs and trees at nursuries, making it profitable for them to carry such a stock at reasonable prices.

This awareness of the contribution natural greenery can make to living is spreading in other ways as well. Experiments with pocket parks in the midst of our cities, small retreats of foliage, fountains, birds, flowers, and peacefulness, have been so successful that we can expect wider use of them. They are one answer to the charge that our cities are becoming bleak seas of asphalt and concrete.

It's as if urban mankind is trying to get back some of the basic satisfaction there always has been in getting dirt under his fingernails as he cultivates the soil, the enjoyment of a walk through woods and meadows.

The right plants can actually reduce your maintenance chores.

As a Realtor, I would advise property owners to provide good landscaping around your home or other building. Aside from the satisfaction it contributes to living, it will contribute dollars to your pocket when and if you sell.

If you are interested in selling your property, call Berrien Real Estate Service, 983-1585.

No-Smoke Clinic Beginning In Niles

A five-day quit smoking clinic is scheduled for next Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Community room of the Niles National Bank and Trust Co., Niles.

Directors of the program are Dr. David Peshka, general practitioner from Niles, and Dr. Horace Shaw, director of the Andrews university alumnae association.

Bridgman To Hear Sand Mine Opinions

BRIDGMAN — Bridgman city planning commission has scheduled a public hearing prior to issuing a permit to Martin-Marietta Aggregates, Rockton, Ill., for sand mining some 300 acres of dune property inside the city limits.

The public hearing will be held Wednesday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. at Bridgman city hall, according to Geno Teramo, planning commission member.

The dune area in question is bordered on the east by I-94, on the south by Church Camp road, on the west by Lake Michigan, and on the north by Lake street. The land is owned by Martin-Marietta.

Details of the permit application will be explained at the hearing and citizens will be able to express their opinions on the matter, Teramo said.

No-Smoke Clinic Beginning In Niles

A five-day quit smoking clinic is scheduled for next Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Community room of the Niles National Bank and Trust Co., Niles.

Directors of the program are Dr. David Peshka, general practitioner from Niles, and Dr. Horace Shaw, director of the Andrews university alumnae association.

The five-day plan is one of the international programs using five group therapy sessions conducted with films, lectures and demonstrations. The buddy system is utilized. Each person has his or her own personal control book to follow each day.

"Most people find it's not as hard to quit as they anticipated," Dr. Peshka said. He serves as president of the board of directors of the Berrien county unit of the American Cancer Society. He said the program is designed for any, and all, smokers and is especially helpful to those under daily pressure and work strain.

The program is free.

"Those attending will find themselves with some spare change at the end of the week by saving the cost of cigarettes," Dr. Peshka said.

The five-day program helps those that want to stop smoking. It also offers connective information on other bad health habits. Dietary advice, exercise tips and standard good health hints are included in the program.

Dr. Peshka said that the clinics are recognized by the American Cancer Society and the Seventh-day Adventist church.

Aging Panel Seeks Tri-County Elderly

Citizens over the age of 60 in Berrien, Van Buren and Cass counties are being contacted so that the needs of the elderly can be determined.

Robert L. Dolsen, executive director of the Southwestern Michigan Regional Commission on Aging, Inc., says it will take about a year for 15 full-time workers to talk with the estimated 40,000 elderly persons in the area.

Of that number, Dolsen says, 18 per cent are living below current poverty standards.

Workers will be going door-to-door to locate all citizens over 60, regardless of need. Even now affluent older persons may eventually have need for services such as meals-on-wheels, transportation, housing repairs, legal aid, nutrition or part-time employment, Dolsen said.

The interviewers will compile information for future planning purposes and explain programs to those contacted. Those canvassing the area work for the Senior Information and Referal Service, which is a section of the commission on aging.

Aging Panel Seeks Tri-County Elderly

Citizens over the age of 60 in Berrien, Van Buren and Cass counties are being contacted so that the needs of the elderly can be determined.

Robert L. Dolsen, executive director of the Southwestern Michigan Regional Commission on Aging, Inc., says it will take about a year for 15 full-time workers to talk with the estimated 40,000 elderly persons in the area.

Of that number, Dolsen says, 25 per cent are living below current poverty standards.

Workers will be going door-to-door to locate all citizens over 60, regardless of need. Even now affluent older persons may eventually have need for services such as meals-on-wheels, transportation, housing repairs, legal aid, nutrition or part-time employment, Dolsen said.

The interviewers will compile information for future planning purposes and explain programs to those contacted. Those canvassing the area work for the Senior Information and Referal Service, which is a section of the commission on aging.

Cautious Market Declines

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned increasingly cautious and quiet this past week, posting only its third weekly decline of the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials opened strongly with a 13-point gain on Monday, but declined in each of the ensuing four sessions to finish with a net 10.41 loss at 763.06.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dipped 1.37 to 883.39, and the New York Stock Echange's composite index was off .61 at 544.26.

The over-all NYSE tally showed 1,047 losers and 715 gainers among the 1,989 issues traded.

Big Board volume tailed off to 111.88 million shares from 122.19 million the week before.

Monday's strong showing, which carried the market to a seven-month high, was generally seen as an expression of continuing hopes for an improved economic picture in the months ahead.

But, beginning at midday Tuesday, profit-takers took charge, and the market was weak and listless for most of the next four days.

There was one other flurry of excitement, on Thursday, when electronics stocks surged upward amid a burst of speculation over a device called a microprocessor.

Robert W. Sarnoff, chairman of RCA Corp., said the minute instrument had been tested as a means of improving gasoline mileage in cars, with impressive initial results.

But the fireworks lasted only a couple of hours, and the market was sinking again by the end of the day.

On Friday, daily volume slumped to a two-month low of 15.94 million shares amid signs of increasing feeling among investors that the powerful advance of the past three months might have run its course, at least for the time being.

RCA was the week's most-active issue, gaining 1⅝ to 16⅞. But it finished well below the peak of 19 it reached on Thursday at the height of the rally on the microprocessor news.

American Telephone & Telegraph was also active, sliding 2⅝ to 48⅞ on the company's report of its first quarterly earnings decline in three years.

In all, 596 issues hit new 1975 highs on the NYSE, against 19 new lows.

Syntex, the American Stock Exchange volume leader, rallied 4 to 38½. Among other Amex actives, Champion Home Builders lost ⅛ to 4⅛; U.S. Filter was up 1⅞ to 9½, and Permaneer gained ⅞ to 2⅜.

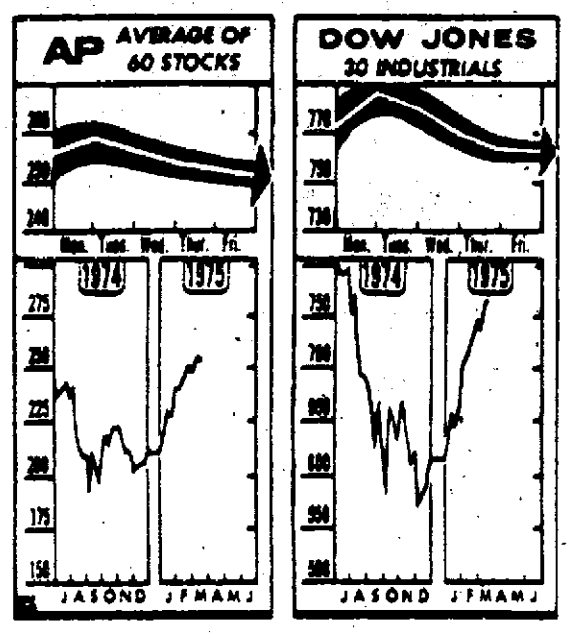
The Associated Press 60-stock average gave up 4.5 to 252.1.



MARKET DIPS: The stock market dipped this week with the Dow Jones Average closing at 763.06 Friday, down 10.41 from the week prior. The Associated Press average fell by 4.3 over the same period to close at 252.1. Analysts attributed the drop to investors taking profits registered in the three month long rally preceding this week. Another Big Bank Cuts Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — First National City Bank, the nation's second largest commercial bank, has lowered its prime lending rate from 7¾ per cent to the industrywide low of 7½ per cent.

The 7½ per cent rate for loans to a bank's most credit worthy customers is the lowest the short term rate has been since the summer of 1973.

The move Friday by Citibank followed three other banks: First Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Mellon Bank, Pittsburgh; and First National Bank of Cincinnati.

Longer term rates such as consumer loans and mortgages are not tied to the prime, but changes in the prime can indicate trends of other rates as well.

U.S. May Void '73 Peace Accords

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is considering a declaration that the 1973 Paris peace agreements on South Vietnam have become inoperative because of the major Communist offensive now underway there, State Department officials say.

And, these officials said Friday, it is believed that the Communist forces will try to establish their own visible South Vietnamese government in Hue, the old imperial capital, instead of following past practice of vanishing into the jungle.

Meanwhile, sharp fighting was reported on the outskirts of Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon in the central highlands. Some 1,000 government paratroopers were rushed to the area as tens of thousands of refugees streamed out in anticipation of the region's abandonment to the Communists.

The Paris peace accords established a cease-fire in South Vietnam and limited the amount of aid the United States could provide the Saigon government and the number of troops and equipment that North Vietnam could bring into the South, to one-to-one replacements for what already was there.

In addition, the accords led to the exchange of war prisoners, including more than 500 American POWs held by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong, and called for an eventual vote by the people of South Vietnam on whether to reunify with North Vietnam.

All U.S. troops were withdrawn from South Vietnam as a result of the agreement.

As the State Department sources gave word of the possible declaration regarding the accords, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen reported, then retracted, that the United States had sought a reconvening of the nations that signed the agreement.

At his daily news briefing, Nessen said the United States had received no response to "an effort to reconvene signatories of the Paris peace accord."

The spokesman later said "the word reconvene was incorrect" and gave reporters copies of a previously released Jan. 11 note in which the United States told the signatories that North Vietnam was in "flagrant violation" of the accords.

Fighting also was reported fierce in South Vietnam's neighbor, Cambodia, amid word from reliable sources in Washington and Phnom Penh that Cambodian President Lon Nol will quit soon in a bid to bring peace to his nation after five years of warfare with Communist-led insurgents.

In Washington, Cambodian Ambassador Um Sirn told newsmen that such reports "may be just speculation."

But he added: "Marshal Lon Nol has said it before that he would not stand, he will not block the way to peace. Whenever there are clear indications that peace can be reached, through his departure, he will not hesitate to leave."

Sirn also said that a congressional cutoff of U.S. military aid to Cambodia "is almost certain" to force the government to surrender unconditionally.

In reply to a question, he said there was "a hope" that a bloodbath could be averted if a gradual turnover of power to the insurgents could take place instead of unconditional surrender.

In Charleston, S.C., retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. troops in South Vietnam, said he thought the United States should either take the issue of North Vietnam's attacks in the South to the United Nations or once again mine Haiphong harbor and bomb Communist supply lines in Laos, Cambodia and the demilitarized zone of Vietnam.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the U.S. ambassador to Cambodia, John Gunther Dean, told the major American relief agency in Cambodia earlier this week to begin closing its operations, but had to pull back the order after it threatened to spread panic among Cambodians.

Sources said Dean told the Catholic Relief Services last Monday to begin withdrawing their non-Cambodian employes from Phnom Penh. Four employes left, but 15 others who also were scheduled to depart received cancellation of their departure orders.

Economic Doom Predicted

LANSING, Mich. (¼ — Abandoning railroad lines would spell economic doom for northern Michigan, a former Penn Central train conductor told federal officials Friday. "If you close the railroads it will be the end of economic growth in the whole northern part of the state," said Gregory Hebert, 23, a University of Michigan chemistry student who worked four years as a freight train conductor and brakeman between Detroit, Jackson and Bay City. Hebert's testimony contrasted with that of Victor A. Long, director of logistics for General Motors, who said, "it may be that abandonment of service will not have an adverse impact on the state."

Ford, Chrysler Recalls

DETROIT (AP) — Ford and Chrysler are recalling a total of 221,303 cars and light trucks to check for Ford carburetor problems that could cause fires and Chrysler jack handles that could cause other troubles. Ford wants owners of 156,303 of its 1975 cars and light trucks equipped with 460-cubic-inch V8 engines to bring them in to check a fuel inlet plug which could dislodge and allow gasoline to spray out. Chrysler is notifying owners of 65,000 of its 1975 Plymouth Gran Furies, Dodge Monacos, Chryslers and Imperials their cars may have faulty jacks.

Wants State In Suit

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan should join other states in a lawsuit aimed at stopping the federal government's penalty program for states with high welfare error rates, a legislator says.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, asked Gov. William Milliken Friday to join in the suit filed against the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The suit contends HEW overstepped itself in penalizing states for error rates in their Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Bullard said. Under the HEW program, states must reduce their error rates by July 1 to three per cent ineligible, five per cent overpaid and five per cent underpaid. Michigan's error rates are 7.8 per cent ineligible, 27.9 per cent overpaid and 8.2 per cent underpaid, according to welfare department figures. The state already has been penalized $5 million and stands to lose more than $30 million by July 1.

Gas Permits Running Out

DETROIT (AP) — Consumers Power Co. will stop issuing new gas permits to commercial users after April 30, unless it locates new supplies of natural gas, the utility said Friday. "In May 1974, the company was authorized to issue up to 4,500 permits for gas service to small commercial and industrial customers," said John Simpson, Consumers vice president. "That is to say, those using less than 6,600 cubic feet an hour. "Those 4,500 permits are nearly exhausted, and we expect all will have been issued by April 30." The decision doesn't affect residential customers, the company said, and new housing customers will continue to be accepted. Consumers Power serves most of Macomb and Oakland counties and portions of western Wayne County in the Detroit area. It also serves Lansing, Flint, Kalamazoo, Saginaw and Alma.

Save Elk Plan Due Soon

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Proposals to save the state's only elk herd from extinction are expected to go before the Natural Resources Commission in about three months. The Department of Natural Resources said Friday it is planning to restore the elk herd, which numbers only 159 according to a recent census. The herd, the only one east of the Mississippi River, is located in the Pigeon River Country State Forest. DNR officials say the most immediate threat to the elk is poaching. The herd lost at least 40 members last year to poachers, almost surely more than the new animals born. Other problems include human disturbances and the elks' deteriorating habitat. The DNR said the it may recommend closure of secondary roads and trails in an effort to provide more protection.

Ship Runs Aground

NAUBINWAY, Mich. (AP) — A 767-foot ore carrier, the Cason J. Callaway, ran aground on the Lansing Shoals in northern Lake Michigan and tore a hole in its hull Friday, but freed itself about four hours later. The Callaway headed for Gary, Ind., the Coast Guard said. A spokesman said repairmen from U.S. Steel were being flown to the damaged ship to begin patching the hull. The Callaway, which is part of the U.S. Steel Great Lakes fleet, was fighting through drifting pack ice and was carried into the shoals, the Coast Guard said. The ship was loaded with 21,000 tons of taconite for Gary steel mills. A sister ship, the John G. Munson, managed to work its way out of the ice and clear the shoals.

WMU Boosts Tuition

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — The Board of Trustees at Western Michigan University boosted tuition Friday and abolished its rule requiring all freshmen and sophomores to live on campus. The tuition increase, $1 per credit hour, is to be used to establish an auxiliary reserve fund to help pay off dormitory bonds. The trustees tabled for one month a request to increase room and board rates for all students and to further hike tuition for non-Michigan residents. The trustees also named Helen Flaspohler to direct the alumni fund.

Big 3 To Open All Plants Monday

DETROIT (AP) — For the first time since November, every Big Three auto plant will be open next week, marking the best week in recent months for a beleagured army of blue collar auto workers.

American Motors will close its Milwaukee body plant for the week, however, suspending 2,500 workers. The closing means layoffs for about 500 workers at AMC's Kenosha, Wis., plant, a spokesman said.

Despite production increases, indefinite layoffs continuing next week will idle 213,375 of 712,000 U.S. auto workers, up from 204,380 this past week when two assembly plants were closed at each of the Big Three.

General Motors will have 137,500 of its 400,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoffs next week. At Ford it is 28,175 of 174,000; it is 45,500 of 114,000 at Chrysler and 1,200 of 24,000 at AMC.

Ford Motor Co. joined GM and Chrysler on Friday by announcing all its 69 U.S. manufacturing and assembly plants will work next week for the first time since last November.

Hourly workers on the job at Ford will total 144,725 as the firm will recall 1,050 employes from indefinite layoff and an additional 5,850 who have been on temporary layoff since March 14.

GM reported Thursday it will work all of its assembly plants for the next two weeks, except a medium-duty diesel truck plant at Pontiac where 2,200 will be laid off for a week beginning March 31.

GM will have 137,500 of its 400,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoff next week.

Meanwhile, a strike at the GM Fleetwood Fisher Body plant continued for the third day. The plant makes bodies for Cadillac.

Some 3,750 Fisher Body workers walked out in a grievance dispute Wednesday, and GM laid off 5,500 Cadillac assemblers when the plant ran out of car bodies to assemble.

Chrysler said one of two assembly shifts will remain on layoff next week at the Hamtramck car plant, which was closed this week. The downtime will keep 4,200 workers off for the week.

Chrysler still will have 45,500 of its 114,000 production workers on indefinite layoff, the firm said.

Fighting also was reported fierce in South Vietnam's neighbor, Cambodia, amid word from reliable sources in Washington and Phnom Penh that Cambodian President Lon Nol will quit soon in a bid to bring peace to his nation after five years of warfare with Communist-led insurgents.

In Washington, Cambodian Ambassador Um Sim told newsmen that such reports "may be just speculation."

But he added: "Marshal Lon Nol has said it before that he would not stand, he will not block the way to peace. Whenever there are clear indications that peace can be reached, through his departure, he will not hesitate to leave."

Sim also said that a congressional cutoff of U.S. military aid to Cambodia "is almost certain" to force the government to surrender unconditionally.

In reply to a question, he said there was "a hope" that a bloodbath could be averted if a gradual turnover of power to the insurgents could take place instead of unconditional surrender.

In Charleston, S.C., retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. troops in South Vietnam, said he thought the United States should either take the issue of North Vietnam's attacks in the South to the United Nations or once again mine Haiphong harbor and bomb Communist supply lines in Laos, Cambodia and the demilitarized zone of Vietnam.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the U.S. ambassador to Cambodia, John Gunther Dean, told the major American relief agency in Cambodia earlier this week to begin closing its operations, but had to pull back the order after it threatened to spread panic among Cambodians.

Sources said Dean told the Catholic Relief Services last Monday to begin withdrawing their non-Cambodian employes from Phnom Penh. Four employes left, but 15 others who also were scheduled to depart received cancellation of their departure orders.

Economic Doom Predicted

LANSING, Mich. (¼ — Abandoning railroad lines would spell economic doom for northern Michigan, a former Penn Central train conductor told federal officials Friday. "If you close the railroads it will be the end of economic growth in the whole northern part of the state," said Gregory Hebert, 23, a University of Michigan chemistry student who worked four years as a freight train conductor and brakeman between Detroit, Jackson and Bay City. Hebert's testimony contrasted with that of Victor A. Long, director of logistics for General Motors, who said, "it may be that abandonment of service will not have an adverse impact on the state."

Ford, Chrysler Recalls

DETROIT (AP) — Ford and Chrysler are recalling a total of 221,303 cars and light trucks to check for Ford carburetor problems that could cause fires and Chrysler jack handles that could cause other troubles. Ford wants owners of 156,303 of its 1975 cars and light trucks equipped with 460-cubic-inch V8 engines to bring them in to check a fuel inlet plug which could dislodge and allow gasoline to spray out. Chrysler is notifying owners of 65,000 of its 1975 Plymouth Gran Furies, Dodge Monacos, Chryslers and Imperials their cars may have faulty jacks.

Wants State In Suit

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan should join other states in a lawsuit aimed at stopping the federal government's penalty program for states with high welfare error rates, a legislator says.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, asked Gov. William Milliken Friday to join in the suit filed against the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The suit contends HEW overstepped itself in penalizing states for error rates in their Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Bullard said. Under the HEW program, states must reduce their error rates by July 1 to three per cent ineligible, five per cent overpaid and five per cent underpaid. Michigan's error rates are 7.8 per cent ineligible, 27.9 per cent overpaid and 8.2 per cent underpaid, according to welfare department figures. The state already has been penalized $5 million and stands to lose more than $30 million by July 1.

Gas Permits Running Out

DETROIT (AP) — Consumers Power Co. will stop issuing new gas permits to commercial users after April 30, unless it locates new supplies of natural gas, the utility said Friday. "In May 1974, the company was authorized to issue up to 4,500 permits for gas service to small commercial and industrial customers," said John Simpson, Consumers vice president. "That is to say, those using less than 6,600 cubic feet an hour. "Those 4,500 permits are nearly exhausted, and we expect all will have been issued by April 30." The decision doesn't affect residential customers, the company said, and new housing customers will continue to be accepted. Consumers Power serves most of Macomb and Oakland counties and portions of western Wayne County in the Detroit area. It also serves Lansing, Flint, Kalamazoo, Saginaw and Alma.

Save Elk Plan Due Soon

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Proposals to save the state's only elk herd from extinction are expected to go before the Natural Resources Commission in about three months. The Department of Natural Resources said Friday it is planning to restore the elk herd, which numbers only 159 according to a recent census. The herd, the only one east of the Mississippi River, is located in the Pigeon River Country State Forest. DNR officials say the most immediate threat to the elk is poaching. The herd lost at least 40 members last year to poachers, almost surely more than the new animals born. Other problems include human disturbances and the elks' deteriorating habitat. The DNR said the it may recommend closure of secondary roads and trails in an effort to provide more protection.

Ship Runs Aground

NAUBINWAY, Mich. (AP) — A 767-foot ore carrier, the Cason J. Callaway, ran aground on the Lansing Shoals in northern Lake Michigan and tore a hole in its hull Friday, but freed itself about four hours later. The Callaway headed for Gary, Ind., the Coast Guard said. A spokesman said repairmen from U.S. Steel were being flown to the damaged ship to begin patching the hull. The Callaway, which is part of the U.S. Steel Great Lakes fleet, was fighting through drifting pack ice and was carried into the shoals, the Coast Guard said. The ship was loaded with 21,000 tons of taconite for Gary steel mills. A sister ship, the John G. Munson, managed to work its way out of the ice and clear the shoals.

WMU Boosts Tuition

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — The Board of Trustees at Western Michigan University boosted tuition Friday and abolished its rule requiring all freshmen and sophomores to live on campus. The tuition increase, $1 per credit hour, is to be used to establish an auxiliary reserve fund to help pay off dormitory bonds. The trustees tabled for one month a request to increase room and board rates for all students and to further hike tuition for non-Michigan residents. The trustees also named Helen Flaspohler to direct the alumni fund.

Big 3 To Open All Plants Monday

DETROIT (AP) — For the first time since November, every Big Three auto plant will be open next week, marking the best week in recent months for a beleagured army of blue collar auto workers.

American Motors will close its Milwaukee body plant for the week, however, suspending 2,500 workers. The closing means layoffs for about 500 workers at AMC's Kenosha, Wis., plant, a spokesman said.

Despite production increases, indefinite layoffs continuing next week will idle 213,375 of 712,000 U.S. auto workers, up from 204,380 this past week when two assembly plants were closed at each of the Big Three.

General Motors will have 137,500 of its 400,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoffs next week. At Ford it is 29,175 of174,000; it is 45,500 of 114,000 at Chrysler and 1,200 of 24,000 at AMC.

Ford Motor Co. joined GM and Chrysler on Friday by announcing all its 69 U.S. manufacturing and assembly plants will work next week for the first time since last November.

Hourly workers on the job at Ford will total 144,725 as the firm will recall 1,050 employes from indefinite layoff and an additional 5,850 who have been on temporary layoff since March 14.

GM reported Thursday it will work all of its assembly plants for the next two weeks, except a medium-duty diesel truck plant at Pontiac where 2,200 will be laid off for a week beginning March 31.

GM will have 137,500 of its 400,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoff next week.

Meanwhile, a strike at the GM Fleetwood Fisher Body plant continued for the third day. The plant makes bodies for Cadillac.

Some 3,750 Fisher Body workers walked out in a grievance dispute Wednesday, and GM laid off 5,500 Cadillac assemblers when the plant ran out of car bodies to assemble.

Chrysler said one of two assembly shifts will remain on layoff next week at the Hamtramck car plant, which was closed this week. The downtime will keep 4,200 workers off for the week.

Chrysler still will have 45,500 of its 114,000 production workers on indefinite layoff, the firm said.

The table shows the monthly principal plus interest payments for each $1,000 of mortgage. To find your monthly payment, multiply the appropriate number in the table by the number of thousands to be borrowed.

For example, if you are looking at a $50,000 home and can put 20 percent down ($10,000), you are left with a $40,000 mortgage. If you use an interest rate of 8½ percent on a 30-year mortgage, your key number in the table is $7.68. Multiply this times 40 (thousands to be borrowed) and you'll find that your monthly mortgage payments will be $307.20.

This table can also show you something about the market. Take your same 30-year, $40,000 mortgage, and multiply it by the key number at 7¾ interest rate. The result is $286.80. Comparing these two interest rates, you'll find that the higher rate results in a difference of only $244.80 per year.

But, when you think that a home in the $40 to $50,000 price range is appreciating at a rate sometimes in excess of $4,000 a year, you can see that the interest rate difference is insignificant to what you would lose if you continue to wait.

Inflation, energy shortages, population growth, and sewer moratoriums will continue to push the price of homes up. Now is the time to buy, before they get any higher. Once you've bought, the appreciation will be to your advantage.

So, establish the price range you can afford. Calculate your monthly payments from the table. (A general rule is, you can afford to pay 25 percent of your monthly earnings for your housing). Keep in mind, when you buy, you will be improving your tax standing...so you'll be getting some of that monthly payment back next year.

And, don't worry, financing is available. Ask your real estate agent about it.

Now, you're ready to shop Herald-Palladium real estate ads.

Do It Yourself Mortage Calculator and Home Buyer Convincer

You'd like to buy a house — you're not quite sure how much you can afford to spend...and, of course, the amount of the monthly payment is important. Using the Home Loan Payment Calculator below, prepared by the United States League of Savings Associations, you can easily compute your monthly principal and interest payments for any amount at a range of interest rates...and over 20, 25 or 30 years.

HOME LOAN PAYMENT CALCULATOR
Length of Mortgage

Interest Rate	20 Years	25 Years	30 Years
7.5%	$8.06	$7.39	$7.00
7.75	8.21	7.56	7.17
8.	8.37	7.72	7.34
8.25	8.52	7.89	7.51
8.5	8.68	8.06	7.68
8.75	8.84	8.23	7.87
9.	9.00	8.40	8.05
9.25	9.16	8.57	8.23
9.5	9.33	8.74	8.41

SOURCE: United States League of Savings Associations

The table shows the monthly principal plus interest payments for each $1,000 of mortgage. To find your monthly payment, multiply the appropriate number in the table by the number of thousands to be borrowed.

For example, if you are looking at a $50,000 home and can put 20 percent down ($10,000), you are left with a $40,000 mortgage. If you use an interest rate of 8½ percent on a 30-year mortgage, your key number in the table is $7.68. Multiply this times 40 (thousands to be borrowed) and you'll find that your monthly mortgage payments will be $307.20.

This table can also show you something about the market. Take your same 30-year, $40,000 mortgage, and multiply it by the key number at 7¾ interest rate. The result is $286.80. Comparing these two interest rates, you'll find that the higher rate results in a difference of only $244.80 per year.

But, when you think that a home in the $40 to $50,000 price range is appreciating at a rate sometimes in excess of $4,000 a year, you can see that the interest rate difference is insignificant to what you would lose if you continue to wait.

Inflation, energy shortages, population growth, and sewer moratoriums will continue to push the price of homes up. Now is the time to buy, before they get any higher. Once you've bought, the appreciation will be to your advantage.

So, establish the price range you can afford. Calculate your monthly payments from the table. (A general rule is, you can afford to pay 25 percent of your monthly earnings for your housing). Keep in mind, when you buy, you will be improving your tax standing...so you'll be getting some of that monthly payment back next year.

And, don't worry, financing is available. Ask your real estate agent about it.

Now, you're ready to shop Herald-Palladium real estate ads.

To find the right place, at the best price for you, turn to the Real Estate Section in the Herald-Palladium.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR POLLY BERGEN

Did you start off as a singer?—B.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Correct. When I was 16, I got a job singing on a Pasadena radio station. I was soon fired because of a flood of complaints from listeners. This is what happened: I sang a country-western lullaby ("Go to Sleep My Little Buckaroo"), and all the ladies were furious because instead of their children going to sleep, their husbands became very "interested" in me. It seems my voice—which was always low and husky—was too sexy and suggestive.

FOR BART STARR, head coach of the Green Bay Packers

How do you feel about the football tradition that says ex-quarterbacks don't make good head coaches in the National Football League?—Roger Davidson, Durham, N.C.

● I intend to bury that next to the one that said a black man couldn't play quarterback in the National Football League.

FOR KITTY CARLISLE, panelist on "To Tell the Truth"

Are the gowns you wear on the show your own?—Cecilia Borowicz, Stephen, Minn.

● Yes. The reason I have so many is because I never throw any of them away. You see, I haven't gained an inch or an ounce in 30 years, so all my clothes still fit. I don't get rid of anything because I know if you wait long enough, everything eventually comes back into fashion again.

FOR JASON MILLER, star of "The Nickel Ride"

Do you think most actors come to admire the characters they're playing?—J.N., Ogden, Utah

● "Understand" might be the better word. When I played the priest in "The Exorcist," I was one jump ahead, because I was strictly raised as an Irish-Catholic. Many actors portray murderers and criminals, and I'm sure they don't "admire" them. But if they research the character, they get to "understand" what makes the character tick, and so are able to give the role much more realism.

FOR RON NESSEN, presidential press secretary

Could a woman do your job?—Robert Barney, San Antonio, Texas

● Definitely. As a matter of fact, President Ford has just appointed Mrs. Margita White, formerly of the Nixon press team, to be an assistant press secretary.

FOR HARRY KEMELMAN, author of "Tuesday the Rabbi Saw Red" and other books

I'm surprised that your "Rabbi" series hasn't been filmed yet. Why?—Kathy Ryan, E. Freetown, Maine

● So am I! What's even more surprising is that the series was purchased way back in 1965. A number of scripts have been written—and rejected—and various actors proposed for the lead. The film, if it ever gets off the ground, is based on the first book, "Friday the Rabbi Slept Late." There is also some TV interest. Keep your fingers crossed.

FOR SUSAN FORD

Why do you always wear blue jeans? Do your friends treat you differently now that you're the daughter of the President?—L.A., Durham, N.C.

● I wear blue jeans because I really do like them. And I still have the same friends I had before we moved to the White House. We still have the same kind of fun together.

FOR TRISH VAN DEVERE

Did you ever regret becoming an actress?—L.E., Asbury Park, N.J.

● Only once, when I was 16 and in summer stock. I had always wanted to go to Europe and that was the year my friends decided to go. I couldn't join them because of my stage commitment. My only consolation was that they didn't send me glowing postcards from exotic places. When they got back, they told me, "We had a dreadful time, and you didn't miss a thing by not coming with us."

FOR HOWARD K. SMITH, "ABC Evening News"

Were you angered by the "protesters" who interrupted your program last October?—Terry Davis, Alma, Ark.

● I was certainly angry that supporters of a fanatical terrorist movement used our news program to propagate their bloody cause. However, since one was a priest, I asked the police to release them. I suggested to the priest that his conscience should punish him for helping create a hell on earth for the children of Northern Ireland. If he had no conscience, he would look on arrest as martyrdom, which would serve no purpose but to reinforce his fanaticism.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is Woody Allen ever serious?—M.P., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● He's always serious when he's working or doing something that's important to him—like acting, writing or playing the clarinet. When he's relaxed he likes to clown around. Not too well known is that Woody Allen's second love is sports. He plays in New York's Broadway Softball League in the summer and keeps in shape during the winter by playing tennis. Actor Tony Roberts, now starring on Broadway in "Absurd Person Singular," is a good friend of Woody's. He says Woody's strongest points in tennis are his outfit and serve—both of which are designed to cripple his opponent with laughter. His usual garb on the courts is a multicolored T-shirt, oversized boxer shorts reaching to his knees, unmatched Argyle socks and dirty brown sneakers with white laces.

"They were the beginning of our past"

THE HAMILTON MINT TREASURY OF AMERICAN FOLKLORE

Actual size of each ingot is 1¼" x 1¾"

Paul Bunyan — Johnny Appleseed

Edition is limited to only 10,000 proof finish solid silver ingot sets—when these are gone, there'll be no more!

A Strictly Limited First Edition
Series of 24 Ingots in .999 Fine Silver
Only $13.75 per Ingot

For more than two centuries we Americans have passed along in songs and stories, the fantastic feats of our folk heroes—men, bigger than life, who could "kill a bar" with bare hands, shoot the eye out of a hawk in flight or fell an oak with one stroke of a double-bitted ax.

The most famous figures of American folklore, real and fictional, are in this new fine art series. Included are: Paul Bunyan; Davey Crockett; Johnny Appleseed; Rip Van Winkle; Wyatt Earp and Casey Jones—plus the other great characters who have been loved and immortalized by Americans for 200 years by the telling and retelling of their stories.

OUR RICH FOLK HERITAGE PRESERVED IN SOLID SILVER

To commemorate our famous American Folk Heroes, The Hamilton Mint will issue a first edition series of twenty four ingots—each will be a glorious example of the engraver's art and each will contain 480 grains of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available. All will be gleaming proof finish ingots. The 24 superbly crafted ingots will be issued at the rate of two a month for 12 months. At the end of that time subscribers will have amassed over 11,000 grains of silver—more than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

A STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST EDITION

Only 10,000 first edition sets in proof finish pure silver will ever be minted. And, only one complete proof set will be issued to each subscriber. Once the edition limits have been reached, the dies for these ingots will be destroyed . . . thus establishing forever the rarity and integrity of this fine collection.

YOUR OWN PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Each proof-finish ingot in your collection will be minted expressly for you. Each will carry your exclusive matching serial number along with the hallmark of The Hamilton Mint, an acknowledged mark of excellence for fine medallic art.

You will also receive a signed Certificate of Authenticity attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of your collection.

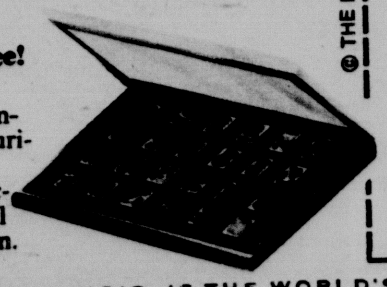
INVESTMENT POTENTIAL WITH GUARANTEED PRICE PROTECTION

When your application is accepted by The Hamilton Mint, your original purchase price of $13.75 for each pure silver ingot is guaranteed for the entire series—even though the price of Silver and Gold may climb in the international metals market. This guarantee is particularly significant because it comes at a time when leading economists are predicting continued increases in the price of precious metals in the years ahead.

The Hamilton Mint does reserve the right to limit the edition below the published maximums but once your application is accepted, your subscription is guaranteed.

Presentation Case Included Free!

Each subscriber to the series will receive a specially designed presentation case that combines the luxurious appearance of finely crafted wood with lucite. Sturdy construction permits you to display as well as protect your valuable collection.



The 24 Kt. Gold on Pure Silver Archive Collection

The exquisite detail of these finely sculptured ingots is brought out even more, and the set made even more desirable, with a layer of 24 Kt. Gold. This special archive edition is being limited to only 5,000 . . . making this edition quite rare. Each ingot will be individually serially numbered and hallmarked, and will cost just $18.75.

THE HAMILTON MINT, LOCATED IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILLINOIS, IS THE WORLD'S 2ND LARGEST PRIVATE MINT

A Writer, A Lawyer, A Doctor, An Athlete, An Actor:

Family Weekly Takes a New Look At the Agony of Divorce

By Helen Dorsey

Barbara Howar, Washington author who hit the best-seller lists with her "Laughing All the Way," scoffs at the usual agonies of divorce, "especially in a time when divorce is as common as it is! Why should people feel they have failed? I think people would rather say they made a mistake! Frankly, the worst thing about divorce are our archaic divorce laws. Get rid of them and we'll have much less trouble!

"My husband and I had an 'amicable divorce.' By the time his lawyer said, 'Are you going to let her get away with that?' and my lawyer said, 'You've got to grab this,' then it became an expensive negotiation. We could have worked it out ourselves.

"God knows I went through the worst guilt: thinking I was depriving the children of their father. But you go about your business and you do the best you can." Barbara strongly believes in Margaret Mead's theory that children can be happy and normal being raised by several people as long as they feel loved and get quantities of the right kind of attention. "These children get a lot of attention and love from their father. When they're with me, they get my undivided attention. They also get a lot of love and attention from their stepmother, in-laws, cousins and friends. It's almost like a commune. They get affection and direction from several responsible people rather than just two.

"Above all, children need to know you care about them and love them. You have only to work a little harder and not take them for granted." Barbara has lived through the agony of almost having her children taken away from her. "I value them and never take them for granted. I don't say I treat them like crown jewels! I don't take them out and polish them and tell them how great they are all the time, only when they deserve it. They are not pandered to."

Barbara says that she and her ex-husband have "no power struggle. When my daughter complains about the way her father disciplines her, I say, 'That's your daddy's way of thinking. You're going to have to deal with him on his own terms.' In fact, I think shifting children back and forth between two parents—if it's properly done—can help to prepare them for the topsy-turvy world in which they live. Their preparation is better than that of the child who comes out of the neat nest where everything is firm and happy! That's the trap of middle-America marriages. Luckily, I happen to have very resourceful children. My 12-year-old says, 'We've been divorced since I was six.' "

"The problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?' "—F. Lee Bailey

F. Lee Bailey, the famous criminal lawyer, says he finds handling divorce cases "agonizing and frustrating. My office very rarely takes on divorce cases and only if it's a favor for someone," says Bailey. "First of all, I don't think lawyers belong anywhere near divorce cases. They don't do their clients much good. In fact, they can do them a great deal of harm.

"Lawyers will get two parties together who could probably sit down together and settle their differences and instead get them to reach a separation. In their anxiety to appear to have done a good deal for their clients, they just cause a wider breach between them. But the problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?'

"Uncertainty is the greatest problem for people seeking a divorce. So often they don't really know what they want. They come to us not to solve a legal problem but to make a decision as to what it is they want." Bailey feels that "psychological counseling may be the answer. Everyone who is wrapped up in a divorce case wants all the friends he can get for reassurance. So often the lawyer is supposed to fulfill that role as well."

A Writer, A Lawyer, A Doctor, An Athlete, An Actor:

Family Weekly Takes a New Look At the Agony of Divorce

By Helen Dorsey

Barbara Howar, Washington author who hit the best-seller lists with her "Laughing All the Way," scoffs at the usual agonies of divorce, "especially in a time when divorce is as common as it is! Why should people feel they have failed? I think people would rather say they made a mistake! Frankly, the worst thing about divorce are our archaic divorce laws. Get rid of them and we'll have much less trouble!

"My husband and I had an 'amicable divorce.' By the time his lawyer said, 'Are you going to let her get away with that?' and my lawyer said, 'You've got to grab this,' then it became an expensive negotiation. We could have worked it out ourselves.

"God knows I went through the worst guilt: thinking I was depriving the children of their father. But you go about your business and you do the best you can." Barbara strongly believes in Margaret Mead's theory that children can be happy and normal being raised by several people as long as they feel loved and get quantities of the right kind of attention. "These children get a lot of attention and love from their father. When they're with me, they get my undivided attention. They also get a lot of love and attention from their stepmother, in-laws, cousins and friends. It's almost like a commune. They get affection and direction from several responsible people rather than just two.

"Above all, children need to know you care about them and love them. You have only to work a little harder and not take them for granted." Barbara has lived through the agony of almost having her children taken away from her. "I value them and never take them for granted. I don't say I treat them like crown jewels! I don't take them out and polish them and tell them how great they are all the time, only when they deserve it. They are not pandered to."

Barbara says that she and her ex-husband have "no power struggle. When my daughter complains about the way her father disciplines her, I say, 'That's your daddy's way of thinking. You're going to have to deal with him on his own terms.' In fact, I think shifting children back and forth between two parents—if it's properly done—can help to prepare them for the topsy-turvy world in which they live. Their preparation is better than that of the child who comes out of the neat nest where everything is firm and happy! That's the trap of middle-America marriages. Luckily, I happen to have very resourceful children. My 12-year-old says, 'We've been divorced since I was six.' "

"The problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?' "—F. Lee Bailey

F. Lee Bailey, the famous criminal lawyer, says he finds handling divorce cases "agonizing and frustrating. My office very rarely takes on divorce cases and only if it's a favor for someone," says Bailey. "First of all, I don't think lawyers belong anywhere near divorce cases. They don't do their clients much good. In fact, they can do them a great deal of harm.

"Lawyers will get two parties together who could probably sit down together and settle their differences and instead get them to reach a separation. In their anxiety to appear to have done a good deal for their clients, they just cause a wider breach between them. But the problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?'

"Uncertainty is the greatest problem for people seeking a divorce. So often they don't really know what they want. They come to us not to solve a legal problem but to make a decision as to what it is they want." Bailey feels that "psychological counseling may be the answer. Everyone who is wrapped up in a divorce case wants all the friends he can get for reassurance. So often the lawyer is supposed to fulfill that role as well."

Dr. David Reuben, author of "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Sex . . . ," says of psychotherapy: "Quite honestly, psychiatric treatment should not be the treatment or the approach or first resort in divorce or potential divorce. his own problems. It's very much like the mother who rushes her child to the doctor at the first sign of a runny nose. That does not help the child develop immunity to disease or to deal realistically with his problems.

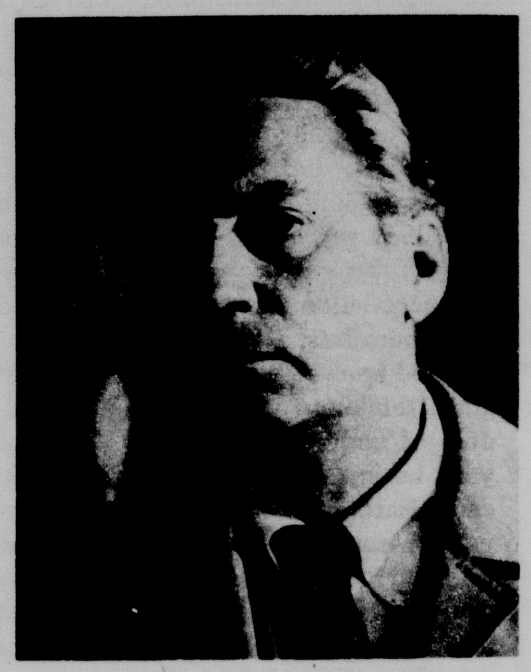
"Divorced people who take themselves off like basket cases to the psychiatrist are copping out. They are simply shifting the responsibility to somebody else. There's really no substitute for being honest with yourself."

The greatest agony of the psychiatrist is "constantly being on guard against becoming emotionally involved with the patient's problems. Once you identify with the patient's agonies, you're trapped." He finds the whole concept of "no-fault divorce" is often greatly distorted. "The responsibility is easily 50-50, or maybe 60-40, but seldom goes beyond that. Seldom is there a situation where a psychiatrist can honestly say, 'I've got a poor patient who is the victim of a scheming wife, or this lady has a cruel brute for a husband.' In very subtle, very unconscious ways, everyone contributes to the mutual destruction of a marriage.

"The psychiatrist must avoid the pitfall of thinking his patient is the innocent one, because it's never that way. And for you to think that way and convince your patient to think that way (it doesn't take much coaxing) can only do a great deal of harm."

Tennis pro Bobby Riggs enjoys being a swinging bachelor, shies away from marrying again. Yet at first, he says, "I felt so terribly lonely, I was almost beside myself. I felt I had to have somebody who needed me just to prove to myself somebody still wanted me. I cut out an interesting piece from the newspaper and sent it to my son, asking him to send it to his mother. It was about the pangs and readjustments a man has to make, especially when the woman initiated the divorce, which was what happened in my case.

"The first couple of years I had several very nice lady friends. Each relationship lasted about six months. I'm over the real rough spots now. I've even come around to the place where I like the companionship of many women. All in all, I've been married for 33 years—13 years for one marriage and 20 years for the second. But, believe it or not, now I'm beginning to think I'm not the marrying kind. Maybe I was meant to be a bachelor all along!"



Peter Finch feels the degree of agony in divorce has a great deal to do with the age at which one gets the divorce. "It's much more agonizing for a woman than a man, and the older she is, the more desperate she feels. Whereas, if she's a young woman, she says, 'Well, I'll suffer, but I can make it again!'

"My greatest agony is the sense of failure. I suppose that's true with both parties. Then there's the period where you miss the habit of being with someone more than you miss the person." The twice-divorced actor says that he often wonders what happened to his marriages. "There's always a kind of self-incrimination if you're really honest, because it's always two people's fault, not just the other one."

He remains "good friends" with his first wife, Tamara, who has never remarried. But he says that "in neither case—maybe because of the sort of women I married—did I go through the terrible emotional business so many other people do. I guess in that way maybe I'm lucky."

This May 25, Johnny Rutherford will be shooting for his second straight Indianapolis 500 win. He never complained, however, and his cheerful good nature made him one of the most popular personalities in U.S. Auto Club racing competition. Leo Durocher's line—"Nice guys finish last"—was continually applied to Rutherford until he broke through last year to win the Indy. People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

City or Country: Is One Better Than the Other?

True or False: If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People who were raised in the country have the happiest childhood memories.

2. There are two sides to the much-argued question of whether small-town or big-city life is most conducive to psychological well-being.

3. Whether children do better in school in an urban or in a rural area depends to a large extent on what part of the nation they live in.

4. If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city.

5. Country life is better for people of retirement age.

6. Country people have more friends than city people.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to a Social Science Research study in which 100 persons ranging in age from 65 to 92 were interviewed by researchers "who encouraged them to reminisce about childhood and to assess their childhood as predominantly happy or unhappy." The findings: The people with a happy childhood tended to be those who had been reared in a rural setting.

2. True. As one university study evaluating the results of leading investigations shows, "A comparison of mental illness in rural and urban areas indicates a greater incidence in areas with a high population density." And it's pointed out that individuals in big cities are exposed to more situations involving fear, anger and other stress-producing stimuli that frequently have ill effects on mental and emotional well-being. But there is also another side of the coin. An extensive study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Foundations Fund for Psychiatric Research indicates that many people find the small town's "prying eyes and clacking tongues" oppressive, and that for them the city's more tolerant attitude provides marked psychological benefits.

3. True. Sociological studies show that in some areas "only 40 percent of the rural students are performing academically to capacity compared to over 50 percent of urban students . . . and that grade averages were consistently lower for the rural subjects." However, similar studies of rural and urban schools conducted in the Midwest showed that the rural students not only averaged better grades than city children but had better attitudes toward education in general.

4. False—as evidenced by sociological studies at Michigan State University over a ten-year period, which evaluated the progress of young men from rural areas. People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

City or Country: Is One Better Than the Other?

True or False: If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People who were raised in the country have the happiest childhood memories.
2. There are two sides to the much-argued question of whether small-town or big-city life is most conducive to psychological well-being.
3. Whether children do better in school in an urban or in a rural area depends to a large extent on what part of the nation they live in.
4. If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city.
5. Country life is better for people of retirement age.
6. Country people have more friends than city people.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to a Social Science Research study in which 100 persons ranging in age from 65 to 92 were interviewed by researchers "who encouraged them to reminisce about childhood and to assess their childhood as predominantly happy or unhappy." The findings: The people with a happy childhood tended to be those who had been reared in a rural setting.

2. True. As one university study evaluating the results of leading investigations shows, "A comparison of mental illness in rural and urban areas indicates a greater incidence in areas with a high population density." And it's pointed out that individuals in big cities are exposed to more situations involving fear, anger and other stress-producing stimuli that frequently have ill effects on mental and emotional well-being. But there is also another side of the coin. An extensive study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Foundations Fund for Psychiatric Research indicates that many people find the small town's "prying eyes and clacking tongues" oppressive, and that for them the city's more tolerant attitude provides marked psychological benefits.

3. True. Sociological studies show that in some areas "only 40 percent of the rural students are performing academically to capacity compared to over 50 percent of urban students . . . and that grade averages were consistently lower for the rural subjects." However, similar studies of rural and urban schools conducted in the Midwest showed that the rural students not only averaged better grades than city children but had better attitudes toward education in general.

4. False—as evidenced by sociological studies at Michigan State University over a ten-year period, which evaluated the progress of young men from rural areas. Results: "Those who migrated to small cities exhibited the highest occupational attainment, followed by migrants to large cities; migrants to other rural areas ranked third."

5. True—in a great many respects. As one team of investigators has observed, rural life offers more healthful living for older people than urban environments simply because of the fresh air, sunshine, lack of congestion and the simplicity of life. However, many rural areas do have disadvantages, such as inadequate medical facilities. And this may account for the fact that studies of some rural areas indicated a higher incidence of ailments and afflictions in older persons than for the same age bracket among city dwellers.

6. True—at least so far as young people are concerned, as shown by Kansas State University studies, in which men and women students (married and single) were interviewed as to the number of persons they considered to be close friends. Results: Students from rural areas averaged appreciably more friends than students from metropolitan areas. This was believed due to the fact that "they feel more an intimate part of their total home community than do urban youth."

Jobmanship

Where Your Hidden Office Enemies Come From

When you're promoted to a new position or move on to a new company, you may be astonished to discover you have some ready-made enemies. The better you understand what produces such behavior, the more easily you can locate your secret opponents, anticipate their actions and cope. In his American Management Associations' books on business life, Elton T. Reeves points out that ambush hatreds are usually caused by: 1) Jealousy. Your enemy would shoot at anyone holding your job. He, himself, isn't qualified to do the work, yet he'd like to be in your position. Fortunately, this type of jealousy usually leads the attacker into indiscriminate criticism that is clearly untrue. 2) Revenge. This kind of enemy is qualified for your job but was unable to obtain it. By discrediting you, he hopes to push you out and make another try for it. 3) Pride. There's the possibility that someone who has a say voted against your getting the job. Now his pride is involved and he's determined to see you fail so that his original judgment will be vindicated. Add to Reeves' list: 4) That's not the way I did it. Your work style is different from that of someone who once held your job or a similar one. Therefore, you must be "wrong" and "incompetent." 5) You're not going to show me up. You're obviously competent and a threat to the status quo. How to handle these enemies: Where you can, turn your enemy into an ally by proving to him that your success will benefit his job future. The more smoothly you can disarm your opponent, the better. Most bosses don't value the employee who churns up the work scene as the center of a personality battle.

GIANT SHADE TREE SALE!

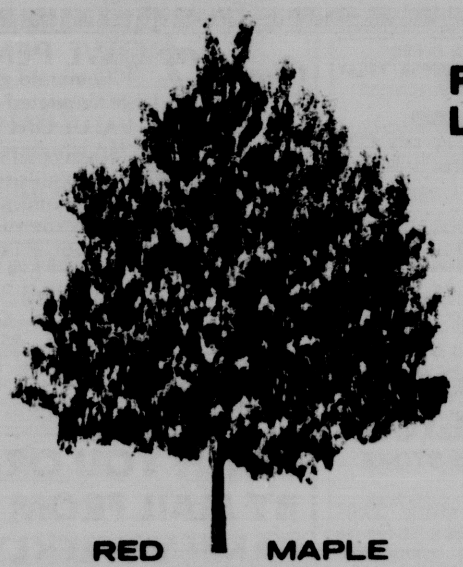
America's Most Popular "Fast Growing" Shade Trees

Orange Leaves

SUGAR MAPLE

(Acer Saccharum)

This tree is the largest of all the maples, and is known as a hard maple. Its wood is the source of excellent hard lumber. Its outstandingly beautiful array of yellow and orange hues in the fall make it a sight to remember due to the foliage thickness of the tree. Due to the fact it is long-lived and very hardy, it is a welcome addition to any home. Grows to 60 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

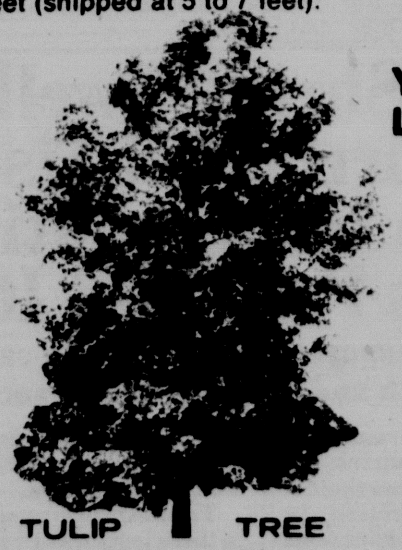


Red Leaves

RED MAPLE

(Acer Rubrum)

This is one of the most beautiful of all shade trees. Besides having brilliant scarlet red leaves in the fall of the year, it has another excellent trait — it is an extremely fast grower. It is very easily transplanted and many experts agree it will grow practically anywhere in the U.S.A. Grows to 60 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).



Yellow Leaves

TULIP TREE

(Lirodendron tulipifera)

This handsome, highly symmetrical tree is a very large growing tree reaching heights of eighty feet or more. Its yellow-green leaves turn bright yellow in the fall and in the late spring it has vivid orange and yellow tulip shaped flowers. Very fast growing and is related to the magnolia. Its physical appearance is very similar, and like the magnolia, is easily transplanted. It is also a hardy tree. Grows to 80 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

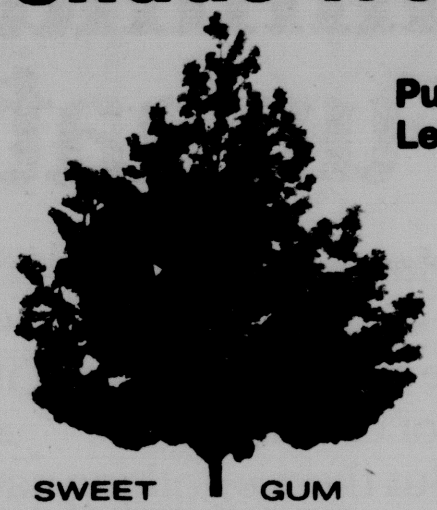
It is a very desirable lawn tree with lacy fern-like foliage. It is sometimes referred to as the "fastest growing shade tree in America," and has been the subject of many articles on street planting by city governments. It thrives in practically all areas. Grows to 50 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

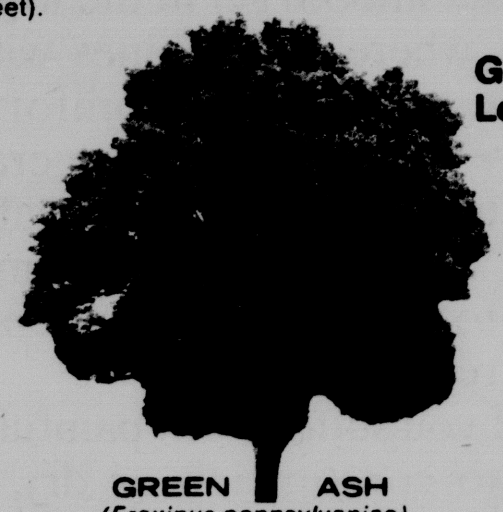


Purple Leaves

SWEET GUM

(Liquidambar Styraciflua)

The Sweet Gum with its regular pyramid outline and bold, star-shaped foliage is one of the best trees for autumn color, turning rich shades of crimson to purple in the fall. It is native to a wide range of the eastern third of the U.S., from New Jersey and central Illinois, south to Florida and Texas. Its symmetrical beauty is an asset to anybody's home grounds. Reaches 50 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).



Green Leaves

GREEN ASH

(Fraxinus pennsylvanica)

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

GIANT SHADE TREE SALE!

America's Most Popular "Fast Growing" Shade Trees

Orange Leaves

SUGAR MAPLE
(Acer Saccharum)

This tree is the largest of all the maples, and is known as a hard maple. Its wood is the source of excellent hard lumber. Its outstandingly beautiful array of yellow and orange hues in the fall make it a sight to remember due to the foliage thickness of the tree. Due to the fact it is long-lived and very hardy, it is a welcome addition to any home. Grows to 60 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

Red Leaves

RED MAPLE
(Acer Rubrum)

This is one of the most beautiful of all shade trees. Besides having brilliant scarlet red leaves in the fall of the year, it has another excellent trait — it is an extremely fast grower. It is very easily transplanted and many experts agree it will grow practically anywhere in the U.S.A. Grows to 60 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

Yellow Leaves

TULIP TREE
(Lirodendron tulipifera)

This handsome, highly symmetrical tree is a very large growing tree reaching heights of eighty feet or more. Its yellow-green leaves turn bright yellow in the fall and in the late spring it has vivid orange and yellow tulip shaped flowers. Very fast growing and is related to the magnolia. Its physical appearance is very similar, and like the magnolia, is easily transplanted. It is also a hardy tree. Grows to 80 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).

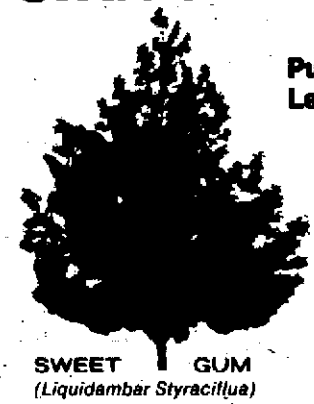
Green Leaves

THORNLESS HONEY LOCUST
(Gledistsia Triacanthos Inermis)

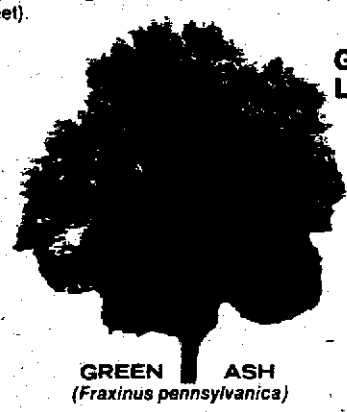
This shade tree is widely planted as a substitute for the American Elm: this thornless variety has the same form as a graceful wine glass. It is a very desirable lawn tree with lacy fern-like foliage. It is sometimes referred to as the "fastest growing shade tree in America," and has been the subject of many articles on street planting by city governments. It thrives in practically all areas. Grows to 50 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).



Purple Leaves

SWEET GUM
(Liquidambar Styraciflua)

The Sweet Gum with its regular pyramid outline and bold, star-shaped foliage is one of the best trees for autumn color, turning rich shades of crimson to purple in the fall. It is native to a wide range of the eastern third of the U.S., from New Jersey and central Illinois, south to Florida and Texas. Its symmetrical beauty is an asset to anybody's home grounds. Reaches 50 feet (shipped at 5 to 7 feet).



Green Leaves

GREEN ASH
(Fraxinus pennsylvanica)

Toddlers and Psychotherapy: What's Being Done–And Why

By Alan D. Haas

The records show that Lee Harvey Oswald exhibited signs of emotional disturbance at age two and a half, frequently running away from the homes of a baby-sitter and an aunt. Would the assassination of President Kennedy have taken place if Oswald had been sent to a psychiatrist as a child? "No one can say for sure," asserts Dr. Gilbert Kliman, director of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry at White Plains, N.Y. "But Oswald was a child who should have been given preventive help."

Psychic wounds, Freud said, most often begin in childhood. Psychiatrists and psychotherapists still believe this. Yet, oddly enough, mental-health professionals have been reluctant to treat young children who have been subjected to traumatic events and bad environments. Perhaps part of the blame also goes to parents who excuse their children's unstable behavior by saying things like: "Oh, it's a phase Johnny's going through. He'll outgrow it."

But what if Johnny doesn't outgrow it—or worse, if his neuroses outgrow Johnny and overwhelm him? More and more therapists are coming to believe that treating tots, even at age three, may prevent years of suffering later. "There is no sure way to immunize against mental illness," says Dr. Kliman, "but at least some of the risks are preventable through early psychotherapy."

Certain experiences in the life of any small child are a high risk to his mental health. High on the danger list, says Dr. Kliman, are these:

- The death of a parent
- Divorce
- Abandonment
- Alcoholic or drug-addicted fathers or mothers
- Any kind of severe mental, physical or even sexual abuse

Here are the symptoms Dr. Kliman looks for:

- Repeated nightmares
- Bad eating habits
- Overly aggressive traits
- Failure to develop normal social or language patterns

Frederic Lewis

"Children cannot tolerate painful emotions very long or well without reliable support," Dr. Kliman says. "But therapy can be more successful with young children. Their problems are lesser and the children offer less resistance to treatment."

The Center for Preventive Psychiatry sends therapists into surrounding communities to tell parents and teachers how to recognize potentially troublesome behavior in the very young, and it seeks out children who manifest such disturbances. In some cases, parents also receive treatment at the center. One father and his three children—ages three, seven and ten—received several months of therapy to help them adjust to the fact that the mother was dying of cancer. "As a result," Dr. Kliman says, "they learned there was no need to pretend that everything was fine. The mother's death, after that, did not come as so much of a shock."

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy is no response at all. If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent, it means a powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion.

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy, according to the doctor, is no response at all. "If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent," he says, "it means a pathologically powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion."

One child who is being treated at the Center for Preventive Psychiatry is four-year-old Jimmy, a class clown who incited other children to beat him up and provoked his teachers. He would sometimes run into the street, dangerously near automobiles, although he was thought by his family not to know that his mother had killed herself with an automobile. In therapy, he revealed intense rage at his mother for dying and depriving him of the good, loving care she had given him. Following much treatment he can now play and learn in a regular school.

Dr. Kliman is particularly interested in orphaned children. Youngsters who lose one or both parents at any early age run a risk several times greater than normal of suffering some form of mental depression as adults. He cites the case of Richard, eight, whose father had died and whose brother had married. Richard's sister had left for college, and his mother took a job that required some travel. All this loss and separation left the lad overwhelmed, and it was not surprising he was failing in school, was immature for his age, restless—and suffered many related symptoms.

"The personality is very vulnerable at an early age," says Dr. Kliman. He believes that too many parents as well as mental-health professionals have tended to gloss over this vulnerability and to ignore antisocial symptoms. When the antisocial behavior persists, Dr. Kliman feels, and normal adjustments are impeded, then treatment is indicated. "Nevertheless," he says, "we still lack proof that mental illness can be prevented."

The work of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry may help gather some of that missing evidence. One thing seems clear already: A lot of preschool children who need help aren't getting it. The country needs more professionals like Dr. Kliman.

HERE'S WINSTON
The mystery dog

According to local folklore, the reason that Winston, a shy Labrador, lives at this particular crossroad in England is because he lost his master in a car crash at the same spot three years ago. Since then, he has become something of a mythological mascot for the local townspeople. Sometimes he trots off to the local hospital, wanders around the grounds, then returns to the crossroad. People in the neighborhood have been puzzled for years. Nobody knows who built him a fiber-glass doghouse (just out of sight, to the left). For that matter, nobody knows why he answers to the name Winston. "We see no reason to move him on," says a local policeman. "He's not a danger to traffic. I see the dog a lot and he's got more road sense than most humans."

QUOTE: "Jacob Franks, the father of little Bobby Franks, who was brutally murdered by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb in Chicago, carried his bitterness against his son's murderers to the grave. His will set aside money for a lawyer to protest, if ever the murderers came up for parole. Said the Franks will: 'A lenient governor, a shrewd lawyer—there are many ways they could be put at liberty.' But Loeb was murdered in prison by another inmate. Leopold, who was always considered to have been a tool in Loeb's hands, became a model prisoner, and became such an expert on the handling and reading of X rays he was considered invaluable by the prison, and was much respected. Even Jacob Franks probably would not have objected when Leopold was finally released from prison, after 30-odd years, and moved to Puerto Rico, where he died." BOB BARKER
His favorite "consequence"

Bob Barker, who makes a living putting people through funny paces, recalls with relish his favorite happening on the "Truth or Consequences" show: "Once we had it fixed so a contestant had to park a convertible in an area where he'd touch the bumper of a small car ahead of him. That car, which was small enough to slip completely under the rear chute of a cement truck in front of it, triggered the cement to spill down into the open car. The man, of course, got out, but you can imagine his reaction! But even funnier, to me, was the actor we hired to play the owner of the car the man was parking. He came out and ad-libbed, 'What are you going to do? My car is full of cement and my lunch is in there!'"

A TV dinner doesn't yet
Mean gnawing on a TV set,
But I foresee that such is coming—
A thought, indeed, that's rather numbing.
No need to thaw this TV dinner,
Just turn it on, and it's a winner.
Until it warms itself, one munches
A tuning button—how it crunches.
Soap operas are next. Once swallowed,
They're by a bloody Western followed,
Then riblike bits of solid state
And crispy tubes that should be great,
And lastly wires that criss and cross
And serve one well as dental floss.

When a matronly woman filling out an employment application came to a space marked "age," she hesitated for a couple of minutes. "The longer you wait," whispered the personnel manager, "the worse it gets."

We were giving ourselves a family treat by eating in a rather ritzy restaurant. As we sat waiting for our order, I was quite proud of how nicely our three children were behaving. Then our meal arrived and five-year-old Debbi's eyes fairly popped at seeing all the goodies. "Better than anything," she cried, very loudly, "I like eating in this rest room!" —Margaret Shauers

Will your health insurance pay when you DON'T go to the hospital?

Mutual of Omaha's new MONEY BACK health insurance can protect you three ways . . .

can pay you IN the hospital

can pay you OUT of the hospital

can refund ALL your premiums if you NEVER get sick or hurt

UP TO	AS MUCH AS

disability income benefits can be provided when a covered sickness or accident keeps you from working.

What hospital insurance does for hospital bills, this Mutual of Omaha plan can do for your grocery, rent and clothing bills . . . important protection for working men and women. There is a Homemakers' plan for housewives, too.

Our figures show that you're seven times more likely to be laid up at home than in the hospital. That could leave an awful lot of bills unpaid if your health insurance covers you only in the hospital. Mutual of Omaha thinks you need protection at home, too . . . and does something about it.

With this plan, the family income can be protected during and after hospitalization . . . protected even if you never go to the hospital. And, in addition, if you never get sick, never get hurt, every cent you pay in premiums will be refunded when your policy matures at age 65.

Mutual of Omaha guarantees that you'll collect at least as much as you've paid in when you keep your policy in force to age 65. If you do receive benefits, and they total less than you've paid in at age 65, you then collect the difference. If you've never received benefits, you get a 100% refund . . . every penny you've paid in.

As a breadwinner, man or woman, married or single, you can select the amount you qualify for (from $100.00 to $1,200.00 a month . . . up to $40.00 a day) to help replace your paychecks when a covered sickness or accident keeps you from working. These monthly disability income benefits are payable over and above any benefits you receive for hospital and medical bills. They are yours to spend as you please for any purpose you choose . . . yours to use for every kind of bill.

THERE ARE SEVEN REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER THIS MUTUAL OF OMAHA PLAN

1. You may qualify for a plan that can provide up to $1,200.00 monthly income benefits (up to $40.00 a day) to spend as you see fit if you're sick or hurt and can't work, or refund all your premiums when your policy matures at age 65 if you stay well.

2. These disability income benefits are provided in and out of the hospital.

3. Your coverage becomes effective immediately for new sickness contracted or injury received after your policy is in force. Pre-existing conditions (old health problems) will not be covered for 12 months. This applies to such conditions shown on your application and not excluded from coverage.

4. Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness.

5. Your policy protects you as a passenger in any kind of aircraft—even a private plane.

6. Benefits are provided for disabilities incurred both on and off the job. They are available in addition to any Workmen's Compensation and Employer's Liability coverage.

7. You have this renewal agreement: no matter how often you may receive benefits, Mutual of Omaha guarantees to renew your policy as long as premiums are paid on time. Your premium can be changed only when changed for all policies of your form and class in your state.

Please note that the amount of the benefit, the premium, and the deductible period vary with the plan you qualify for. And that these disability income benefits are not payable for losses caused by war or military service; narcotics, unless prescribed by a physician; childbirth, pregnancy, or resulting complications. Coverage terminates at retirement or age 65, whichever comes first.

HERE'S WINSTON
The mystery dog

According to local folklore, the reason that Winston, a shy Labrador, lives at this particular crossroad in England is because he lost his master in a car crash at the same spot three years ago. Since then, he has become something of a mythological mascot for the local townspeople. Sometimes he trots off to the local hospital, wanders around the grounds, then returns to the crossroad. People in the neighborhood have been puzzled for years. Nobody knows who built him a fiber-glass doghouse (just out of sight, to the left). For that matter, nobody knows why he answers to the name Winston. "We see no reason to move him on," says a local policeman. "He's not a danger to traffic. I see the dog a lot and he's got more road sense than most humans."

QUOTE: "Jacob Franks, the father of little Bobby Franks, who was brutally murdered by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb in Chicago, carried his bitterness against his son's murderers to the grave. His will set aside money for a lawyer to protest, if ever the murderers came up for parole. Said the Franks will: 'A lenient governor, a shrewd lawyer—there are many ways they could be put at liberty.' But Loeb was murdered in prison by another inmate. Leopold, who was always considered to have been a tool in Loeb's hands, became a model prisoner, and became such an expert on the handling and reading of X rays he was considered invaluable by the prison, and was much respected. Even Jacob Franks probably would not have objected when Leopold was finally released from prison, after 30-odd years, and moved to Puerto Rico, where he died." From "Wills: A Dead Giveaway," by Millie Considine and Ruth Pool (Doubleday, $6.95). UNQUOTE.

BOB BARKER
His favorite "consequence"

Bob Barker, who makes a living putting people through funny paces, recalls with relish his favorite happening on the "Truth or Consequences" show: "Once we had it fixed so a contestant had to park a convertible in an area where he'd touch the bumper of a small car ahead of him. That car, which was small enough to slip completely under the rear chute of a cement truck in front of it, triggered the cement to spill down into the open car. The man, of course, got out, but you can imagine his reaction! But even funnier, to me, was the actor we hired to play the owner of the car the man was parking. He came out and ad-libbed, 'What are you going to do? My car is full of cement and my lunch is in there!'"
